Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The Senate has sustained the action of the caucus yesterday by a decisive vote—38 yeas to 9 nays—the latter being all Democrats, and Mr. SUMNER's friends declining to vote. The debate was brought into the open Senate by Mr. SUMNER's friends, much to the regret of a majority of the Republicans, but Mr. SCHURZ and Mr. WILSON were implacable. Mr. HOWE made the usual formal motions to bring the adoption of the bill before the Senate. Mr. WILSON and SCHURZ sought to carry its consideration over one day by objection, but the question being one of privilege, this did not succeed. Mr. WILSON next objected to the motion to suspend the rule requiring a ballot, but afterward withdrew, perhaps because he did not like to show quite so plainly the dependence of Mr. SUMNER on Democratic votes. Mr. SCHURZ moved to postpone the consideration till to-morrow, but on a division it was defeated by 29 to 31. The discussion that followed was on this motion, Pending an order for the yeas and nays, Mr. SCHURZ in a few bristling sentences called for some Senator to give a reason for the proposed change. Mr. HOWE stated briefly that it was necessary because Mr. SUMNER had refused to hold personal intercourse with the President and Secretary of State. Mr. WILSON made a very warm speech, claiming that Mr. SUMNER could and was willing to hold personal intercourse. Hundreds of thousands of thoughtful, pure, trusted, brave and noble men of the Republican Party would have their hearts wrung by the infelicense of the proposed change, and would see neither justice nor wisdom in it. Mr. MORRILL, of Vermont, said he had opposed the change, but thought all usual and proper means of opposition had been exhausted, and no further obstruction should be placed in the way. Mr. SCHURZ thought otherwise, and made a sharp speech, dealing out flattery to Mr. SUMNER, sarcasm regarding the fitness of Mr. CAMERON for the position, and heaping denunciation upon the Administration, charging it with dictating the change in the interest of the San Domingo annexation scheme. He thought it was time for the Senate to decide the question whether it was ready to sacrifice its sense of duty to the whim of one single man.

Mr. EDMUNDS took up this last query, and thought it a proper one. Would the Senate sacrifice its sense of duty to the whim of one man, whether that man be the Senator from Massachusetts or the Senator from Missouri, and thought the changing of the chairmanship of a committee a small matter for so much trouble. No Senator had a right to any particular place on a committee. Mr. CORBETT advised foregoing further discussion. Mr. SCOTT replied to the insinuation of Mr. SCHURZ that every Senator not voting with him was influenced by Executive dictation, to which Mr. SCHURZ answered that he did not imply any such thing. Mr. HOWE complained that the debate was becoming more bitter than it had been in caucus. He sustained his statement of the rupture of intercourse between Mr. SUMNER and the Secretary of State, and related that in presence of high officials, the Senator had refused to answer a question by the Secretary, and boasted of it afterward. Mr. SUMNER denied this assertion, but it afterward appeared, by implication, that the denial was based on the ground that the question did not relate to official business.

Mr. STEWART was for sustaining the report of the caucus, and Mr. WILSON made another speech, more heated than the first, charging directly that the San Domingo business was at the bottom of the change. It would prove, he said, the destruction of the Republican Party, as BUCHANAN's deposition of DOUGLAS from the Committee on Territories had been the destruction of the Democratic Party. Mr. NYE made a characteristic speech, calling the whole affair a tempest in a teapot. Mr. LOGAN said some brave words for SUMNER, and Mr. TIPTON, after making a motion to adjourn, which was lost—28 to 26—spoke, letting his zeal and rage run such a riot that he did not hesitate to expose the secrets of the caucus and Executive sessions, for which he was called to order, without much abating his indignation.

Mr. TRUMBULL made by far the ablest speech of the day, and the most effective, though brief, in favor of retaining Mr. SUMNER. Messrs. SHERMAN and MORTON both took the ground that it was not a question of the propriety of the change, that had been decided on in a council of the party, after fair debate, and the result should be abided. Mr. CRAGIN took the same ground. Mr. SHERMAN indicated that SUMNER ought to resign on account of the expression that had been made, and spoke of its being a great opportunity. The vote to postpone failed by 32 to 16. Messrs. DAVIS and BAYARD took the occasion to stick a pin in the Administration, and the vote on adopting the resolution appointing the Committees, offered by Mr. HOWE, stood 38 to 9.

It is worth nothing that no Republican vote was among the nine, LOGAN, SCHURZ, TIPTON, TRUMBULL and WILSON left the Senate when the roll call began, or sitting in their seats made no response. ANTHONY, who had not voted on the question of postponement, voted for the resolution. Several Senators who voted for the resolution were opposed to the change, but accepted the will of the majority of the party.

THE TARIFF QUESTION.

The free-salt resolution has not into bad shape, the determination of its friends to keep it clear of all entangling or embarrassing amendments has broken down, and it is now so loaded that the passage of anything is questionable. The House went into Committee of the Whole again today by a vote of 106 to 74, and also voted to close all debate in forty-five minutes. About a dozen five-minute speeches were then made, mostly against the bill, when the Committee proceeded to vote on the amendments. The first was an amendment proposed by Mr. WADDELL, of North Carolina, fixing the internal revenue tax on all manufactured tobacco at the uniform rate of sixteen cents per pound. This was agreed to—yeas 75, nays 67. Mr. RANDALL, of Pennsylvania, then moved to put tea and coffee on the free list, which was agreed to—yeas 80, nays 69. Mr. BUTLER then proposed to put potatoes on the free list, which was adopted, as was a like motion by Mr. KERR, of Indiana, to put bunting on the free list. Mr. BUTLER, of Tennessee, tried to get the tax on apple and peach brandy reduced to twenty-five cents per gallon, which was lost, and then KELLEY capped the climax of absurdity by offering as an amendment Gen. SCHENCK's entire Tariff bill of the Forty-first Congress. The Clerk began reading it, but had only progressed a few pages when, in sheer disgust, the Committee rose and the House adjourned until Monday. Where it will all end no one can tell, but probably in nothing being done.

REMOVAL OF POLITICAL DISABILITIES.

Mr. BECK means to take advantage of the present session by pushing his bill for the removal of all political disabilities. The bill which on Tuesday was referred to the Judiciary Committee, was brought back today by a motion to reconsider, and Messrs. BECK and FARNSWORTH made speeches in advocacy of it. There is little prospect of its success at this session. Gen. BUTLER will oppose it, because he wants that matter to be controlled in the Reconstruction Committee, which it is proposed to revive and continue for this Congress.

DINNER TO THE HIGH COMMISSION.

Gen. SCHENCK dined the members of the Joint High Commission, to-night, at his residence, corner of Massachusetts-avenue and Fourteenth street, and they afterward met a large number of the prominent men, in and out of Congress, at the residence of Secretary FISH.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS.

The jurisdiction of the House Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds was today extended over all public buildings erected by the United States, the rules being amended to that effect on motion of Mr. DAWES.

MORE APPROPRIATIONS.

The House today passed a little appropriation bill, introduced by Mr. DAWES, granting $141,852 for deficiencies in the appropriations for the current year, for the Pension Office, Attorney-General's Office, Treasury Department, and contingent fund of the House. It was amended by adding $25,000 for the repair of the Post-office at Omaha, Nebraska, and then passed.

SENATE REPUBLICAN CAUCUS.

A Senate caucus will be held at 12 o'clock to-morrow to hear the report of Senator MORTON's Committee of Five, appointed to take into consideration what measures it is necessary to pass for the suppression of the Ku-Klux.

SOUTHERN OUTRAGES.

Report of the Majority of the Senate Committee—Secret Political Organizations of North Carolina—"Red Strings" and "Ku-klux Klan"—Crimes of the Latter—Gov. Holden's Position—Present Dangers of Union Men.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—Senator SCOTT today made a report from the Select Committee to investigate the alleged outrages in the Southern States. After quoting the resolution under which they were appointed, and the documents referred to them, they say:

From the tenor of the documents referred to the Committee, and the language of the resolution under which it was appointed, it will be seen that the purpose of raising it was to ascertain by investigation—

First—Whether the crimes are of the character alleged to have been committed by organized bands of a political character.

Second—Whether persons and property are secure in the Southern States.

The passage of the resolution authorizing the appointment of a Committee embraces all the Southern States. North Carolina having been made the subject of a special communication from the President, the Committee has confined upon an investigation of the condition of affairs in that State.

NORTH CAROLINA.

In prosecuting their inquiries they desired to have before them the representatives of all shades of political opinion, so that not only in the report of the majority, but in the testimony of the witnesses, the public would have the means of judging as to the true condition of things existing in the State, the causes which have led to it, and who are responsible for its existence or continuance. Accordingly, they sent for, and up to this time have examined, State and Federal Judges, prosecuting officers, political editors, ministers of the Gospel, private citizens, (both white and colored,) members of what is popularly known as the "Ku-klux Klan," Magistrates, constables, members of the bar, men who have been scourged and abused by bands of men in disguise, and, indeed, all classes of persons from whom it was reasonable to expect such testimony could be elicited as would furnish the basis of a reliable judgment upon the subject of inquiry.

In seeking for such witnesses, we had of necessity to be guided by the best information of those better acquainted with the State than are the members of the Committee, and as the inquiry, in the very terms of the resolution, necessarily involved political party feeling, it was due to candor and justice that witnesses should be summoned who were designated by the majority of the Committee, as well as those suggested by the minority, and so far all such have been summoned, and so far as time permitted, have been examined.

The Witnesses.

Of the fifty-two witnesses examined, it will be found that twenty-nine are members of the Republican or Radical Party, and twenty-one are members of the Democratic or Conservative Party. One, a minister, did not state what were his party relations, and another stated he had formed no party connection. In the twenty-one ranked as members of the Democratic or Conservative Party are six members of the Ku-klux Klan, four of whom were summoned because of the belief from previous developments, that they could and would reveal the existence and objects of the organization. The other two were summoned at the instance of the minority of the Committee to show their ill treatment while prisoners in custody of the State Militia, and upon their examination acknowledged that they were members of the Order. The first subject of inquiry then is—Have the crimes and outrages of the character complained of been committed by organized political bands of disloyal or evil-disposed persons in the State of North Carolina?

We first direct attention to the evidence, showing the existence in that State of secretly-organized bodies of a political character; and as the evidence and operations of what are now termed the Ku-klux Klan are canvassed by those who so excuse them, on the ground of prior existence of other secret political organizations, we refer to all that have been mentioned as having any bearing upon the question since the close of the rebellion.

The Red Strings.

The first in point of time is the order known as the "Heroes of America," or the "Red Strings." About the time the reconstruction acts proposed to confer political rights upon the colored citizens, the Union League was introduced into North Carolina. The exact time is not given, but the weight of testimony would seem to fix it about the latter part of 1867. Witnesses were examined who were members of the Union, both in the Northern and Southern States, and many others have given their opinions about its purposes as understood by general reports. There is no doubt that it was established, as alleged in the interest of the Republican Party, that its members were controlled in secret meetings, and that they were bound by an oath. It is equally clear that its purposes were publicly avowed, that it held public meetings and processions in which the members appeared and acknowledged their connection with it. The colored population, generally, became members of that organization; and, to show their estimate of it, the Committee insert an extract from the testimony of SAMUEL ALLEN, a colored man, and a member of the League. That witness states that it increased and countenanced by this League, is manifest throughout all the testimony. Instead of cumbering this report with extracts, we will only refer to pages 21, 41, 57, 95, 119, 132, 144, 147, 148, 149, which will be found testimony verifying this statement. It is denied, and some instances are quoted as sustaining the charge, that the members of the League seek to deter the colored voters from voting the Democratic ticket. That the constitution of the League, as to colored members is against this party, is entirely clear, from testimony, and the colored man who votes it runs counter to the dominant opinion of his race in the State.

The Ku-klux Klan.

With this preliminary reference to the "Heroes of America" and to the Union League, we now come to the establishment of what is termed the "Ku-klux Klan, the real name of which in its several stages has been the "White Brotherhood," "The Constitutional Union Guards," and "The Invisible Empire"—the name "Ku-klux Klan" having been suggested by its members to deceive the public and to enable them to deny connection, so that when called upon the witness stand whether they were members of that organization. This order was instituted in North Carolina some time in 1868, certainly before the Presidential campaign in that year, and, according to some allegations, as early as 1867. As to the exposition of the organization, of the obligations imposed upon its members, the penalty for revealing its secrets, its modes of proceeding, its purposes, members, connections and objects, the Committee here as elsewhere rely on the testimony of one of its members, a man acknowledged by all who have spoken of him to have borne a good character as a lawyer and citizen. Then follows the testimony of Col. RUFFIN, Judge SUTTLE and District-Attorney BUNN.

Acts of these Bodies.

The Committee continue: Having thus spoken of the secret political societies, the other branch of the question is to be answered. What crimes and outrages have been committed by them? Nothing is alleged against the "Heroes of America" or "Red String" Orders, except treason against the Southern Confederacy, although the intrusion of members of the "Grand Army of the Republic" into the "White Brotherhood" is spoken of, there is no evidence adduced to show that the organization of the Grand Army of the Republic exists or has existed in the State of North Carolina; nor does any evidence appear that it is a political society having for its object any complaint appeared against it than its alleged interference with the rights of the South or of the States, which may be inferred from the terms of the oath of the White Brotherhood, a band of outlaws organizing for plunder and with no political purpose, consisting of a few mulattos, in a settlement called "Scuffleton," is shown to have existed in Robeson County, but individual members of the League have violated the laws there is no doubt that they were arrested, identified, tried, convicted and punished by the regular administration of the law in the Courts is testified to by the witnesses. No crimes are alleged to have been committed in pursuance of organized movement among the colored people recently in Chatham County, and also in Walker County, where barns and perhaps other buildings were burned. In those cases a conspiracy was charged, and arrests were had, for trial. W. S. BRADSHAW, a most unwilling witness and a member of the Ku-klux organization, who spoke of the offenses of the negroes as a reason for the establishment of the Ku-klux order, upon cross-examination testified that there was no reason to justify the organization of that body, as the civil law could always be executed in his county at any time for the offenses charged against the Ku-klux, and was in force at the time of the three outrages, where the purposes and modes of operation are shown to have been the same, and concealed under this name they are numerous.

Traces of the Ku-klux.

The message of the President contains documents tending to show the existence of this organization in Stokes County as early as the Fall of 1867, it being alleged that tobacco traders and distillers who evaded the revenue laws were the first to introduce it there, and that the whipping of negroes and threats of violence to prominent men, because of their political opinions, soon after commenced. Up to the 27th of October, 1870, twenty-one cases of whipping and shooting are reported as having occurred in that county. From this list of December, 1868, to the 22d of December, 1870, a list of thirty-eight cases is furnished as having occurred in Alamance County, embracing two murders, one of mutilation, many of whipping, and acts of violence, &c.

A Murder Decreed by Them.

The same message also communicates the preliminary examination before Judge THOMAS, of the Third Judicial District, at Newbern, in the cases of the Lenoir County prisoners charged with conspiracy. The testimony taken on examination shows the existence of the Ku-klux organization in Lenoir and Greene Counties in April, 1870; that the death of Sheriff COLGROVE was voted in one of their meetings because he assisted to arrest one HINES, a member of that order; that he was murdered on the night of the 10th of April, 1870; that HINES, with another member of the order, who was confined in jail with him, were forcibly released from the jail at Kinston by his fellow-members.

The Committee continue with this testimony and the terms of this oath before them. No reasonable man can doubt that the purpose of this organization was political, and any attempt on the part of the witnesses to deny it in the face of the oath, or to give to the organization any other character than for the protection of person and property, can be viewed only as an additional evidence of the extent to which its demoralizing effect and influence have been carried, and any inference of the Committee in its favor.

Treason a Qualification for Membership.

It is to be noticed that after enjoining secrecy, the first requisite to membership is that the "novitiate" is not a member of the "Red String" order, or of the "Heroes of America." Bearing in mind that this order "Heroes of America" was opposed to the rebellion, that its members were charged with treason against the Confederacy, and that it had for its object "adherence to the Constitution of the United States and the preservation of the Union," it follows that the spirit of the organization into which men are admitted under this oath, is that of the rebellion, and that it refuses fellowship to those who were true to United States. The second requisite is, that applicants are members of the Union League. Taking the objects of the League, as given in the testimony, it is clear that no member or it could be admitted into this order, and that an obligation to be true to the Constitution of the United States and to the Constitution of North Carolina, and to support and defend them, disqualified the man who had taken it for membership in the "White Brotherhood." The third requisite is, that the applicant is not a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, a term which a soldier of the Union Army cannot be admitted into it. In the light of this requirement it is not at all singular that the recelation should be made that the majority of the members had been soldiers in the rebel army.

The next assertion guarding against any other possible organization, similar to those named, is that they, the "Heroes of America," the "Union League," and the "Grand Army of the Republic," have the aim and intention to destroy the rights of the South, or of the States, or of the people, or to overthrow the legally constituted authorities of the white man. Asserting this, the man initiated is sworn that he is opposed to all such principles. As if this were not enough, the obligation is made explicit that no member of these organizations, any holding Radical views or opinions, shall be allowed to be initiated. The further obligation to "oppose all Radicals and negroes in all of their political designs," some members of the Order stated they did not remember. The further obligation to "oppose all Radicals and negroes in all their political designs," some of the members of the Order stated they did not remember. But whether it was a part of the obligation or not, the purpose, the intention of the organization leads to that result. It is not necessary to pursue the argument further, nor to cite from the evidence to show that an organization that secured the Constitution as its corner-stone, and the oaths of other secret societies whose objects were to protect and preserve the Government of the United States, is of a political character. What is that political character?

The Ku-klux all Democrats.

The testimony is uniform that none but members of the Democratic or Conservative Party in the State of North Carolina join it. This being the case, members and Press of the political party which, according to the testimony quoted, had 40,000 of its adherents enrolled in those days, would be, to say the least of it, under great temptation to palliate their offenses, or to withhold denunciations, when crimes were charged against them. To show how this subject is viewed by the testimony of several gentlemen of high standing, in opposite political parties, in their own words is given.

Ninety Black and Forty-four White Victims.

In January, 1869, entrance to a jail was procured by a stratagem practiced upon the keeper, and four men who were there charged with crimes were taken out, and two or more of them were murdered. The testimony of witnesses before the Committee related to some proceedings that are thus referred to in the message of the President, besides many cases not thereby referred to. It has been impossible to gather from the instances scattered through but the testimony an entirely accurate list of the outrages that have been committed. In many instances numbers of cases are mentioned as having occurred in a given locality without giving the names or dates. Starting with the cases in Lincoln County, as following the spectacularly referred to as having occurred in other counties. The Committee give the names of ninety blacks and forty-four whites in the Counties of Lincoln, Alamance, Catawba, Caswell, Chatham, Jones, Orange, Rockingham, Rutherford, Wake and other counties, nearly all of whom were whipped, and the remainder were shot, robbed, hanged or driven from their homes. Besides these specific cases of outrages, the testimony refers in general terms to others committed in Moore, Chatham, Person, Buncombe, Surry, Yadkin, Davie, Stokes, Robeson, Sampson, Duplin, Lenoir and Gaston Counties. This list of crimes suggests the question whether they were committed by members of the Ku-klux organization, and by its direction or with its countenance.

The Crimes Voted on in Secret Meetings.

The testimony already quoted and referred to shows that in many instances the murders and whippings of men were expressly voted upon in their meetings, and executed by the members. When it is remembered that a disloyal proceeding in the case of treason incurs the penalty of death, and that of all other secrets such as involve the members in the guilt of assassination, murder and violence, would be most sacredly guarded, it is remarkable, not that so little evidence has been procured bearing upon particular cases, but rather that any should have been elicited. Members of the Order unwilling to go into details have, however, stated enough in general confession to authorize the belief that this organization, by whatever pretence men were induced to enter it, stopped short of no means however criminal to accomplish its purpose. The testimony quoted, almost without exception, establishes that the cases of rapes perpetrated by these bands in disguise were inflicted upon members of the Republican Party, both white and colored, in some instances the fact that they were of that party being given as the reason for the punishment, in others alleged crime being the pretext, while in some such acts as keeping a Sunday-school for colored children were given as sufficient reasons. In one instance there assumed the disguise of the Ku-klux to cover their crimes, but they were detected, convicted, and are now in the Penitentiary. Some of these witnesses also say they have no doubt the disguises were assumed often by bad men who were not Ku-klux.

Security for Person and Property.

The second inquiry, namely, whether persons and property are secure in the State, is considered in two aspects. One, is the civil law adequate to protect those wronged and punish those who are guilty of these crimes? Second, to what extent does this organization still exist and commit acts of violence? On the 12th of April, 1871, the President approved making the act of going masked, disguised or painted, a felony. It was intended to punish the class of cases enumerated. With the fact clearly appearing that the only convictions of men alleged to be Ku-klux were those of three negroes, who sought to screen themselves by assuming disguise to cover their depredations upon other negroes in Alamance County, many persons, and among those whose testimony is quoted, have stated that they believe property and property are as secure under the laws of North Carolina, as under those of Massachusetts, or of Pennsylvania. With the exception of the outrages committed by the secret armed bands of Ku-klux, the statement is true. To what extent that opinion is sustained as to these offenses, when it is shown that over one hundred crimes, ranging from murder to petty larceny, have been committed by the members of the organization made up of adherents of one political party, and that in no one instance has there been conviction or punishment, must be left to the reader of the testimony herewith submitted. Under this state of facts it is idle to say that the victims of these acts of violence have been protected or public safety secured by the vindication of the law, and the punishment of the guilty. How is it now?

The Doings in Alamance.

In pursuance of the authority conferred upon him by the act of Jan. 24, 1870, to secure the better protection of life and property, Governor HOLDEN, in March, 1870, declared the County of Alamance in insurrection. About the 22d of June he sent State Militia into that county under the command of Col. KIRK. Numerous arrests were made of persons charged with being members of the Ku-klux organization, who were held as prisoners in military custody until released upon writs of habeas corpus. It was when these arrests were made that a number of persons confessed to have been members of the Order, and upon the hearing before Judge PEARSON, disclosures were made of its objects and obligations, as they have been disclosed by witnesses before the Committee. The policy of course pursued by Gov. HOLDEN in the exercise of the power conferred upon him by the law referred to, and the conduct and character of the troops employed and of their officers, have been the only commended many witnesses, and while condemned without exception by the Conservatives, seem also to have created some division of sentiment among his political friends. Charges upon persons are known to have been made, and complaint appeared against it than its alleged interference with the rights of the South or of the States, which may be inferred from the terms of the oath of the White Brotherhood, a band of outlaws organizing for plunder and with no political purpose, consisting of a few mulattos, in a settlement called "Scuffleton," is shown to have existed in Robeson County, but individual members of the League have violated the laws there is no doubt that they were arrested, identified, tried, convicted and punished by the regular administration of the law in the Courts is testified to by the witnesses. The testimony taken on examination shows the existence of the Ku-klux organization in Lenoir and Greene Counties in April, 1870; that the death of Sheriff COLGROVE was voted in one of their meetings because he assisted to arrest one HINES, a member of that order; that he was murdered on the night of the 10th of April, 1870; that HINES, with another member of the order, who was confined in jail with him, were forcibly released from the jail at Kinston by his fellow-members.

The Committee continue with this testimony and the terms of this oath before them. No reasonable man can doubt that the purpose of this organization was political, and any attempt on the part of the witnesses to deny it in the face of the oath, or to give to the organization any other character than for the protection of person and property, can be viewed only as an additional evidence of the extent to which its demoralizing effect and influence have been carried, and any inference of the Committee in its favor.

Treason a Qualification for Membership.

It is to be noticed that after enjoining secrecy, the first requisite to membership is that the "novitiate" is not a member of the "Red String" order, or of the "Heroes of America." Bearing in mind that this order "Heroes of America" was opposed to the rebellion, that its members were charged with treason against the Confederacy, and that it had for its object "adherence to the Constitution of the United States and the preservation of the Union," it follows that the spirit of the organization into which men are admitted under this oath, is that of the rebellion, and that it refuses fellowship to those who were true to United States. The second requisite is, that applicants are members of the Union League. Taking the objects of the League, as given in the testimony, it is clear that no member or it could be admitted into this order, and that an obligation to be true to the Constitution of the United States and to the Constitution of North Carolina, and to support and defend them, disqualified the man who had taken it for membership in the "White Brotherhood." The third requisite is, that the applicant is not a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, a term which a soldier of the Union Army cannot be admitted into it. In the light of this requirement it is not at all singular that the recelation should be made that the majority of the members had been soldiers in the rebel army.

The next assertion guarding against any other possible organization, similar to those named, is that they, the "Heroes of America," the "Union League," and the "Grand Army of the Republic," have the aim and intention to destroy the rights of the South, or of the States, or of the people, or to overthrow the legally constituted authorities of the white man. Asserting this, the man initiated is sworn that he is opposed to all such principles. As if this were not enough, the obligation is made explicit that no member of these organizations, any holding Radical views or opinions, shall be allowed to be initiated. The further obligation to "oppose all Radicals and negroes in all of their political designs," some members of the Order stated they did not remember. The further obligation to "oppose all Radicals and negroes in all their political designs," some of the members of the Order stated they did not remember. But whether it was a part of the obligation or not, the purpose, the intention of the organization leads to that result. It is not necessary to pursue the argument further, nor to cite from the evidence to show that an organization that secured the Constitution as its corner-stone, and the oaths of other secret societies whose objects were to protect and preserve the Government of the United States, is of a political character. What is that political character?

The Ku-klux all Democrats.

The testimony is uniform that none but members of the Democratic or Conservative Party in the State of North Carolina join it. This being the case, members and Press of the political party which, according to the testimony quoted, had 40,000 of its adherents enrolled in those days, would be, to say the least of it, under great temptation to palliate their offenses, or to withhold denunciations, when crimes were charged against them. To show how this subject is viewed by the testimony of several gentlemen of high standing, in opposite political parties, in their own words is given.

Ninety Black and Forty-four White Victims.

In January, 1869, entrance to a jail was procured by a stratagem practiced upon the keeper, and four men who were there charged with crimes were taken out, and two or more of them were murdered. The testimony of witnesses before the Committee related to some proceedings that are thus referred to in the message of the President, besides many cases not thereby referred to. It has been impossible to gather from the instances scattered through but the testimony an entirely accurate list of the outrages that have been committed. In many instances numbers of cases are mentioned as having occurred in a given locality without giving the names or dates. Starting with the cases in Lincoln County, as following the spectacularly referred to as having occurred in other counties. The Committee give the names of ninety blacks and forty-four whites in the Counties of Lincoln, Alamance, Catawba, Caswell, Chatham, Jones, Orange, Rockingham, Rutherford, Wake and other counties, nearly all of whom were whipped, and the remainder were shot, robbed, hanged or driven from their homes. Besides these specific cases of outrages, the testimony refers in general terms to others committed in Moore, Chatham, Person, Buncombe, Surry, Yadkin, Davie, Stokes, Robeson, Sampson, Duplin, Lenoir and Gaston Counties. This list of crimes suggests the question whether they were committed by members of the Ku-klux organization, and by its direction or with its countenance.

The Crimes Voted on in Secret Meetings.

The testimony already quoted and referred to shows that in many instances the murders and whippings of men were expressly voted upon in their meetings, and executed by the members. When it is remembered that a disloyal proceeding in the case of treason incurs the penalty of death, and that of all other secrets such as involve the members in the guilt of assassination, murder and violence, would be most sacredly guarded, it is remarkable, not that so little evidence has been procured bearing upon particular cases, but rather that any should have been elicited. Members of the Order unwilling to go into details have, however, stated enough in general confession to authorize the belief that this organization, by whatever pretence men were induced to enter it, stopped short of no means however criminal to accomplish its purpose. The testimony quoted, almost without exception, establishes that the cases of rapes perpetrated by these bands in disguise were inflicted upon members of the Republican Party, both white and colored, in some instances the fact that they were of that party being given as the reason for the punishment, in others alleged crime being the pretext, while in some such acts as keeping a Sunday-school for colored children were given as sufficient reasons. In one instance there assumed the disguise of the Ku-klux to cover their crimes, but they were detected, convicted, and are now in the Penitentiary. Some of these witnesses also say they have no doubt the disguises were assumed often by bad men who were not Ku-klux.

Security for Person and Property.

The second inquiry, namely, whether persons and property are secure in the State, is considered in two aspects. One, is the civil law adequate to protect those wronged and punish those who are guilty of these crimes? Second, to what extent does this organization still exist and commit acts of violence? On the 12th of April, 1871, the President approved making the act of going masked, disguised or painted, a felony. It was intended to punish the class of cases enumerated. With the fact clearly appearing that the only convictions of men alleged to be Ku-klux were those of three negroes, who sought to screen themselves by assuming disguise to cover their depredations upon other negroes in Alamance County, many persons, and among those whose testimony is quoted, have stated that they believe property and property are as secure under the laws of North Carolina, as under those of Massachusetts, or of Pennsylvania. With the exception of the outrages committed by the secret armed bands of Ku-klux, the statement is true. To what extent that opinion is sustained as to these offenses, when it is shown that over one hundred crimes, ranging from murder to petty larceny, have been committed by the members of the organization made up of adherents of one political party, and that in no one instance has there been conviction or punishment, must be left to the reader of the testimony herewith submitted. Under this state of facts it is idle to say that the victims of these acts of violence have been protected or public safety secured by the vindication of the law, and the punishment of the guilty. How is it now?

The Doings in Alamance.

In pursuance of the authority conferred upon him by the act of Jan. 24, 1870, to secure the better protection of life and property, Governor HOLDEN, in March, 1870, declared the County of Alamance in insurrection. About the 22d of June he sent State Militia into that county under the command of Col. KIRK. Numerous arrests were made of persons charged with being members of the Ku-klux organization, who were held as prisoners in military custody until released upon writs of habeas corpus. It was when these arrests were made that a number of persons confessed to have been members of the Order, and upon the hearing before Judge PEARSON, disclosures were made of its objects and obligations, as they have been disclosed by witnesses before the Committee. The policy of course pursued by Gov. HOLDEN in the exercise of the power conferred upon him by the law referred to, and the conduct and character of the troops employed and of their officers, have been the only commended many witnesses, and while condemned without exception by the Conservatives, seem also to have created some division of sentiment among his political friends. Charges upon persons are known to have been made, and complaint appeared against it than its alleged interference with the rights of the South or of the States, which may be inferred from the terms of the oath of the White Brotherhood, a band of outlaws organizing for plunder and with no political purpose, consisting of a few mulattos, in a settlement called "Scuffleton," is shown to have existed in Robeson County, but individual members of the League have violated the laws there is no doubt that they were arrested, identified, tried, convicted and punished by the regular administration of the law in the Courts is testified to by the witnesses. No crimes are alleged to have been committed in pursuance of organized movement among the colored people recently in Chatham County, and also in Walker County, where barns and perhaps other buildings were burned. In those cases a conspiracy was charged, and arrests were had, for trial. W. S. BRADSHAW, a most unwilling witness and a member of the Ku-klux organization, who spoke of the offenses of the negroes as a reason for the establishment of the Ku-klux order, upon cross-examination testified that there was no reason to justify the organization of that body, as the civil law could always be executed in his county at any time for the offenses charged against the Ku-klux, and was in force at the time of the three outrages, where the purposes and modes of operation are shown to have been the same, and concealed under this name they are numerous.

Traces of the Ku-klux.

The message of the President contains documents tending to show the existence of this organization in Stokes County as early as the Fall of 1867, it being alleged that tobacco traders and distillers who evaded the revenue laws were the first to introduce it there, and that the whipping of negroes and threats of violence to prominent men, because of their political opinions, soon after commenced. Up to the 27th of October, 1870, twenty-one cases of whipping and shooting are reported as having occurred in that county. From this list of December, 1868, to the 22d of December, 1870, a list of thirty-eight cases is furnished as having occurred in Alamance County, embracing two murders, one of mutilation, many of whipping, &c., of violence, &c.

A Murder Decreed by Them.

The same message also communicates the preliminary examination before Judge THOMAS, of the Third Judicial District, at Newbern, in the cases of the Lenoir County prisoners charged with conspiracy. The testimony taken on examination shows the existence of the Ku-klux organization in Lenoir and Greene Counties in April, 1870; that the death of Sheriff COLGROVE was voted in one of their meetings because he assisted to arrest one HINES, a member of that order; that he was murdered on the night of the 10th of April, 1870; that HINES, with another member of the order, who was confined in jail with him, were forcibly released from the jail at Kinston by his fellow-members.

The Committee continue with this testimony and the terms of this oath before them. No reasonable man can doubt that the purp more decided Liberals of his party has been healed—at any rate for the time. Mr. GLADSTONE (through whose head, as was once remarked by a member of his present Ministry, the church bells still chime loudly,) got up an elaborate theory about the necessity of sending back the bill to the House of Lords, who threw it out last year, exactly in the same condition as before, the real reason being that he himself extremely disliked going any further; and would not have gone so far, indeed, if he could have helped it. Mr. FAWCETT and some of the more advanced men on the Liberal side, demanded the abolition of the clerical character of college fellowships, denouncing them as traps for the young and thoughtless, and baits for the greedy. But Mr. GLADSTONE would neither agree to this, nor say anything soothing or conciliatory on the subject. A division in which he won through Conservative votes, and in which a considerable number of his supporters went into the lobby against him, brought him to his senses, and he has since announced that the subject is well worthy of consideration, and he will see what can be done about it. This has satisfied the mutineers, and genial harmony and fond fraternity once more pervade the Liberal camp. Nor can the efforts to put the Government in the wrong in regard to foreign affairs be pronounced very successful. Here Mr. GLADSTONE has certainly excited himself to the utmost to help his foes. His public proclamation of the justice of the Russian demand as to the Black Sea, at the very time a Conference was solemnly discussing the question, his misstatement as to Lord CLARENDON, and foolish tittle-tattle about Lord PALMERSTON, his repudiation of Mr. ODO RUSSELL's strong language as to England being bound, under certain circumstances, to go to war against Russia, even without an ally, coupled with his justification of this threat, on the ground that a diplomatist has a perfect right to say what he likes for the sake of getting his proposition accepted,—all these slips of the tongue, to call them nothing worse, have exposed him to very severe animadversion, and have made his colleagues and his party feel exceedingly uncomfortable. Even Lord GRANVILLE's sweet temper for once was ruffled, and there was undisguised vexation in his voice when he confessed to the House of Lords that Mr. GLADSTONE had much better have held his tongue. Last night Mr. GLADSTONE himself was put on his defense, and certainly did not come off the ordeal very satisfactorily. Mr. DISRAELI's attack was wantonly stinging and malicious, and threw his opponent into a towering passion. In his rage Mr. GLADSTONE could do little more than hurl hard words at his assailant, accusing him of all kinds of intentional misrepresentation and tortuous misstatement. As regards the views he attributed to CLARENDON and PALMERSTON he had really no justification to offer; and his explanation as to Mr. ODO RUSSELL was very misty and perplexing. He would neither say that the Government had or had not authorized Mr. RUSSELL to speak as strongly as he did. They had preserved, he maintained, complete freedom as to eventualities. It is difficult to see what kind of freedom this could be, except freedom to repudiate Mr. RUSSELL if they found it convenient, after taking advantage of his "arguments." The debate last evening was a mere duel between the two leaders, and if Mr. GLADSTONE failed to excuse himself gracefully for his undoubted indiscretions, Mr. DISRAELI, on the other hand, took very little by his speech. His tactics should have been to make mischief between the Premier and his own supporters; but the attack showed too much party rancor to be of effect this way, it, indeed, its effect was not just the opposite. While, however, the Government have triumphed against all specific motions directed against them, it must be noted that new sources of irritation and hostility are continually opening up, the last if not the least of these being Lord HARTINGTON's motion for a Secret Committee of Commons—a thing unheard of in recent days, and the mere suggestion of which carries us back to a political period we are all now ashamed of—to consider the disaffected condition of Westmeath. Obviously, if the Government cannot publish their news, they should keep it to themselves, and act on their own responsibility. On Monday the Ministry will find themselves in a very awkward position on this subject.

ARMY REORGANIZATION.

It is quite clear that the Army bill is not to have anything like so smooth a passage through Parliament as the Government at first hoped for it, and as, indeed, it seemed likely to have. My own opinion is that the weak part of the measure is the kind of army which it professes to provide. As far as numbers go, I do not see any objection, nor in point of quality can anything be urged against the regulars. But the militia and the volunteers, even under the new arrangements, will be only a delusion and a snare. Hitherto the militia has been little more than the plaything of the country gentlemen. Every body of a certain social standing in the county is an officer of militia as well as a Justice of the Peace, and their soldiering is about on a par with their justice. You know, perhaps, that "Justices' justice" has passed into a proverb with us. The privates of militia are mostly farm laborers, poachers and the like, with a good infusion of loafers from the towns—a rough, rowdy set who delight in a week or two of soldiering in the bright weather. Their drill is very easy, and they have plenty of time for leaving about drinking in the public houses, and every now and then joining in a savage onslaught on the citizens among whom they are quartered. The upper grades of officers are filled by the Lords or Lords' sons or better sort of Squires of the county, and as they keep these very closely among themselves, there is great difficulty in getting anybody to be subalterns. As a rule the latter are either farmers or lawyers who make themselve useful at elections, or clerks in the Government offices in London, who are brought down from sheer dearth of men to play the part. It is now proposed that the right of appointing officers should be taken from the Lords Lieutenant and vested in the Commander-in-Chief, but the only effectual means of making the militia a real military body would be to officer it exclusively from the regular army, and also if possible to fill the ranks from the same source. The volunteers are even a more wretched sham than the militia. There are some good shots among them, but their drill is very bad. There are whole regiments which at a review have to be kept standing still for fear they should fall to pieces hopelessly if moved about. As for the officers, they are about wholly destitute even of the most elementary parts of military business, and belong socially to the lower sort of "shoddy" people—pushing wine merchants, stuck-up attorneys, jobbers from the city, shop-keepers, vestrymen, &c. Each regiment has the right of electing its own officers, and most of the regiments are governed in their choice by the liberality of the candidates in the shape of beer. The officers generally pay for the band, and sometimes even for the clothing and equipment of the men, the Government furnishing only the rifles and bayonets. Here again some good changes are to be introduced. Measures are to be taken to secure a certain degree of efficiency on the part of the officers, and the privates are also to be required to shoot after a fashion, as well as drill, before they are allowed to pass muster. But even when all this is done, militia and volunteers will certainly be a broken reed to lean upon as an army reserve unless the officers are compelled to pass through the training of the regular army, and the drill of the privates is greatly improved. Generally, however, I find people by no means troubled on these points. They think the proposed army quite large enough and good enough for our wants, and it is the cost of it only that is objected to. The opposition to the Government scheme on the ground of expense comes from two different sides. On the one hand there is the peace people, who want to keep down the army as much as possible, and the economists, who want to keep down all expenditure. On the other hand, the Conservatives, who are usually free enough with the public money, have been seized with a sudden fit of thrift, which is only a pretext for resisting the abolition of the system of selling officers' commissions. What monstrous extravagance, they exclaim, to spend eight or nine millions in abolishing the purchase system at a time like this, when we want every penny we can spare for increasing the number and improving the equipment and armament of our forces! This was the burden of Lord CARNARVON's jeremiad in the House of Lords, and the outcry has also found an echo in the House of Commons. The fact is, the abolition of purchase touches a great many vested interests, both social and political, to say nothing of pecuniary. I have already said that the question is not so clear as probably it seems on your side of the Atlantic, and that practically it has some considerable advantages. For example, it provides a large supply of young officers, and it is on the whole a security that the officers are gentlemen and fairly educated. And it is also a cheap system, for the officers do not and could not live on their small salaries, which will certainly have to be increased if the army becomes a working profession. The main objection, and it is an overwhelming one, is that men who pay a high price for their commissions and go into the army for a year or two, either for fun or as a social duty, will not study military science as, nowadays, it must be studied. What precise effect the abolition of purchase will have on the social standing of officers it is difficult to foretell. It is quite clear that men will not join in future who do not mean to hold their commissions for some time, and thus the large class of birds of passage, those who went into the army for a year or two as "the right thing to do" after leaving college and before settling down to Parliament or matrimony, will be cut off. My own notion is that there will still be a large infusion from the upper ten thousand, but of course the army will become much less exclusively aristocratic than hitherto. It will be no place for mere fine gentlemen, and as this is almost their last retreat, they and their friends will make a stout fight to keep things as they are. Then, the officers who now hold commissions without being themselves wealthy or of high birth, but who have shared the general credit belonging to their cloth in these respects, also resent the leveling process that is now proposed. Already strong hints have been thrown out to the Government to separate the purchase question from that of the general organization of the army, and I should not be greatly surprised if the former were shelved for the present for the sake of getting the latter through. There could hardly be a stronger illustration of the difficulty of putting down vested interests with a firm backing of class privileges and prejudices, than the existence of the disgraceful scandal of selling church livings, which still flourishes as briskly and openly as ever. One has only to turn to any of the clerical newspapers to find the cure of souls unblushingly hawked about like any other merchandise—the age and infirmities of the incumbent, the pleasant situation of the vicarage, near a good trout stream, or in a picturesque country, with agreeable surroundings in the shape of rich and liberal country gentlemen. This should be a warning to those who hope for the speedy abolition of purchase in the army. F. J. H.

SCENES IN PARIS.

General Aspect of the City—The Horse Diet and Its Effects—The Wounded—The Dead Supply—Outside the City—Street Pictures—"No Peace"—Work for France—The New Government.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Saturday, Feb. 18, 1871.

Paris, dark at night, that used to be so brilliant, Paris, with nearly all its great hotels turned into ambulances, Paris, with its lovely women eating horses, and sometimes dining on dogs, Paris freezing—going for months with scarcely fire enough to cook its meagre rations, Paris cold, hungry, dark, with a circle of fire around her; cannon thundering, bloody battle-fields, and at last the shells falling in her streets, slaying her women and children. It is a very sad spectacle. Yet Paris, by daylight, is less changed than one would imagine. The streets are full of disarmed soldiers, and a few thousands of National Guards keep their muskets, and march about with trumpets and drums. The cannon on the walls are all dismounted and given up to the Prussians. A great body of artillery fills the gardens of the Tuileries—all its horses stabled there; all, I suppose, to be given up also, spoils for the conqueror. They are filling up the ditches and carting away the formidable interior barricades, regular, well-planned fortifications. For a mile down the broad and beautiful avenue de l'Impératrice—rechristened Uhrich—the whole ground excepting the roadway is cut into round holes like honeycomb. Each hole is about four feet across, a yard deep, and at the bottom three iron spikes. I think TROCHU was right in saying Paris was impregnable, and that the Prussians wasted every pound of powder they fired. The capitulation was not hastened one day by the bombardment. Paris was at the point of starvation when she surrendered. There were still some horses, but no bread.

THE HORSE DIET.

I talked with a young American in a banking-house about the horse diet. It was not bad tasting, and donkey was nice, but without vegetables it became monotonous, and when the bread became uneatable all horse was disgusting. There were no amusements, and when a fellow had eaten all his horse, he had to go to bed to keep himself warm, and read.

"But you are looking pretty well after it all," said I.

"Oh, yes; never better in my life. I gained twenty pounds during the siege." And I see nowhere any appearance of emaciation. The men look rugged and hardy. Some Mobiles who had been encamped outside the walls all Winter, were as hearty as bears, but when they came in after the armistice, and were quartered on a friend of mine they all got colds. These Mobiles are innocent country lads, who came into Paris last September as green as leeks, and as awkward as any squad of Major Jack Downing's militia; but in two months they could scarcely be told from veteran soldiers. And they fought bravely and well, a friend assures me, in all the sorties, and especially in the last. "We stood," said one of them, "and fired away for hours. We were cut down, but we never saw who killed us. The Prussians were behind breast-works, firing through little holes as big as your hand, and we were not marksmen enough to hit them. We didn't mind being killed, but it was no use; we could not kill them."

THE WOUNDED.

The wounds from the Prussian shells were very severe, and the mortality in the hospitals has been great. In the hotel ambulances more than half the amputations have been lost. The American ambulance, a little village of tents on the Avenue de l'Emperatrice, is an exception—nearly all the cases have recovered. I walked through two or three tents with Dr. JOHNSON, the physician of the ambulance as well as of the American Embassy, and found but one really bad case—I mean as to probable recovery. The rest seemed cheerful and well, and I saw some very remarkable cures of men shot through lungs, liver, and with crushed and torn limbs. The ventilation is perfect, and there was no bad smell whatever. The tent covering is like a skin, giving perfect shelter with free transpiration.

THE FOOD SUPPLY.

It is delightful to see food coming into Paris, and vegetables, fruit, eels and fresh fish, butter and eggs, and live turkeys, ducks and chickens sold from hand-carts in the streets. Eggs are six cents apiece, cheese four francs a pound; but I saw a large turkey carried off for three dollars. Staple articles of food, bread and meat, have their prices regulated by the Government, and this is a check upon all prices. At my hotel, yesterday, the landlady said, "I can give you no coffee—there is no milk—but you can have a cup of chocolate made with water." It was hot and not bad, and the bread is excellent. The artists' crémerie by the Louvre is closed. A great number of restaurants have been shut up, but they are now opening. If there be peace, and the ill seems to me quite superfluous, there will be a great rush of strangers to Paris, and they will spend lots of money. The Parisians will have a good excuse for making them pay siege prices. The return of exiles and the advent of the few strangers who gain admittance has already given a cheerier aspect to the boulevards. But the great current, strange as it may seem, is out of Paris. Hundreds of thousands are getting away. I saw yesterday a crowd of at least four hundred men and women drawn up in a procession four deep in front of the Belgian Legation, taking their turns to get the requisite papers to leave Paris. They have had enough, and fear perhaps what may happen if the Prussians march through Paris, which they seem determined to do, or if the war should be continued. And it is said today that people are allowed to go readily, but no longer to come in, for which I see no reason at all, no more than I see why all letters were examined at Versailles three days ago and had to be sent open, while they now go closed and direct.

OUTSIDE THE CITY.

I was glad to see that so much of the country in the north was being cultivated. For some twenty miles around Paris it is desolate enough. Along the whole line, however, I saw no sign of refreshments, except what every passenger carried; and, as I came hastily, and without even a hand-bag, several kindly offered me of their stocks. But at Creil, I think, two lovely maidens came to the doors of the train with loaves of bread and bottles of wine. I expected famine prices, but the bread was only six sous for a pretty large loaf, and the wine one franc a bottle. I ate and drank perhaps a third of each, and handed the rest over to a poor cobbler working in his stall, as my part of the ravitaillement de Paris.

STREET SCENES.

It is curious to see all the little trades and industries of Paris going on just as if there had been no siege and no bombardment. The flower shops are as lovely as ever—there is even a small flower market beside the Madeleine. Toys and dolls look as pretty as ever. Crowds gather about the print-shop windows. There are more newspapers than ever, though they are of smaller dimensions. The confectionery never looked more exquisite, and those who did not fancy horse could have lived on sugar plums. Last night a lady who had been delighting me with her exquisite music, and whom it was dreadful to think of as one who had helped to devour the eight thousand cab-horses of Paris, said, the worst of it was the monotony. "Toujours cheval." Horse bouillon, horse bouilli, entrée of horse, horse d'œuvre. You eat saddle of horse, you sup on collar of horse, they give you tender lines of horse, there is horse in every carte, traces of horse in every dish. Such were the horsepitalities of Paris. Some ladies contrived to vary the monotony a little. They tell of one lady here who was so overcome by her appetite as to eat her beloved lap-dog. After a hearty meal she looked down at the little heap of bones; tears fell from her eyes. "Poor Bijou!" she exclaimed, "how he would have enjoyed them!"

MONADNOCK.

SPAIN.

Attempt to Assassinate Senor Zorrilla.

Madrid (Feb. 19) Correspondence London Times.

"We are completely satisfied with our work, and intend to continue in the same road!" Such was the literal text of an anonymous letter received by the unhappy widow of Marshal PRIM on the day his remains were carried to the Atocha Church. It was no heartless hoax. It was a message of warning to the other public men who had taken a prominent part in the elevation of King AMADEO to the throne. Some of these men treated it as a joke, but others did not. Among the latter were the Ex-President RUIS ZORRILLA. He took the warning especially to himself, as he had borne a very conspicuous share in the King-making. He presided over the Cortes which voted AMADEO, and over the Commission who went to Italy. Since the death of PRIM, ZORRILLA has hardly ever appeared in the streets without an escort of police, and he has been ridiculed in some of the papers for this extraordinary care of his life. There is now little doubt that to this precaution he owes his escape so far. For once President ZORRILLA was returning to his house without his escort and on foot, accompanied only by a private friend, Señor LUIS HERNANDEZ. Yesterday morning he received a verbal message that if he would grant an interview, the parties desiring it would communicate to him important revelations respecting the authors of the assassination of his friend Marshal PRIM, whom the tribunals of justice have not yet been able to discover, though they are constantly arresting persons "on suspicion." Being excessively anxious to do what in him lay to clear up this fearful mystery, ZORRILLA said he should be willing to see the parties in question in his own house, Calle San Mateo, in the evening. He was told that would not do. They would not come to his house, but would meet him at any other he might appoint. He fixed 10 at night, in the house of a friend living in Calle Pez. Punctual to his appointment, he went, and stayed till nearly 2 o'clock this morning. It is needless to say no one came. He was accompanied by his particular friend Don LUIS HERNANDEZ. They left about 2 o'clock, and walked in the direction of Señor ZORRILLA's house. They had not gone many steps when a man emerged from the shadow of a doorway and ran rapidly past them. Señor ZORRILLA noticed the incident, and remarked to his friend, "Lo presentia; estamos rodidos" (we are surrounded), "we are sold, (duped.") A few yards further on and they came to the Calle San Roque, a narrow street which opens on to the Calle Pez. From a dark corner in this street two men emerged, crossed the sidewalk, and fired at them. The balls, of which there must have been at least seven, to judge by the marks they made in the wall of a currier's shop, No. 10 Calle Pez, passed close behind them, but fortunately without touching them. With great presence of mind, Señor HERNANDEZ pulled out his revolver, and, firing it twice, ran after the assassins, who fled near the Calle San Roque, leaving their trabuco (blunderbuss) on the ground. In the dark shadow between two of the lamps they disappeared, and as there was a watchman at the other end of the street, who declares no one ran out of it, they must have entered one of the houses, doubtless left open for that purpose. Señor ZORRILLA and some policemen, who did come very quickly on the scene, watched all the avenues by which persons could leave the houses until daybreak, when a large force of police searched the houses. They have arrested four men and one woman; but whether these are the guilty parties or not I am unable at present to say. Great excitement prevails in the city.

MURDER AND SUICIDE

Shocking Tragedy in London.

A shocking tragedy has taken place in Soho, London. It appears that six years ago a Frenchman, named M. VICTOR HASMARD LEON LOTROM, took apartments upon the second floor of No. 27 Great Pultney-street, Golden-square, Soho. He was a married man, about thirty years of age, and resided with MARIE VICTOIRE LEONIE ELISABETH LOTROM, who was some seven years his junior. They lived happily together. His income was 3300 a year, which he received from a Parisian firm for watching their interests in London. His wife was entitled to the possession of some house property which had been left to her in Paris. While living in Great Pulteney-street they had a family of four children. Two of their offspring died three months ago, and M. LOTROM felt deeply the loss that he had sustained. Since that time he has been in a very desponding state of mind. On Friday afternoon, Feb. 24, he left his lodgings for the purpose of purchasing a French newspaper. About 3 o'clock in the afternoon he returned to the house with the paper in his hand. It was then observed that he appeared very much depressed. He said that he had just received that the house of his employers in Paris had been destroyed by the German bombardment, and that his wife's house property had also been destroyed. He then went up into his room and sat down, and whenever he was spoken to he replied in a most melancholy manner. At six o'clock in the evening Mrs. LOTROM proceeded to put her little son, aged three years, to bed. Just after she had placed the boy upon the bed, her husband entered the room with a double-barreled pistol. She, perceiving that he was excited, attempted to rush from the room. While she was doing so he fired at her, and shot her through the left jaw. The bullet penetrated her brain, and she fell dead on the floor. The murderer rushed from the room, and in his hurry he let the pistol fall by the side of the dead body of his wife. He then took another pistol from his side coat pocket. He pulled the trigger and the bullet went through his heart. He died immediately. Miss CLARKE, a young lady of eighteen, living in the house, hearing the report of the pistol shot, ran upstairs, and she was horrified by discovering the corpses of the Frenchman and his wife lying in two small pools of blood. She called in the Police, who caused the little boy and the baby, aged four months, to be taken to the work-house.

A revivalist essayed, in a sermon in Boston, a day or two ago, to show the folly, sin and evil influence of dancing, and roundly asserted that the children of dancing people are generally cripples, or afflicted with some chronic disease.

A Providence man, about seven years ago, was persuaded to take some stock in a fancy corporation for a bad debt, and recently some of its creditors, finding his name in the list of stockholders, commenced suits against him and obtained judgments which have thus far amounted to $25,000, and the end is not yet.

A young white man who married a colored girl in Grenada, Miss., a few days ago, was taken from bed on the second night after the wedding by a party of men, who clothed him in a full suit of tar and feathers, and notified him to emigrate. He went, with a threat to return with State militia.

It is reported that the Democrats have completed their canvass of New-Hampshire, and that it gives the State to the Republicans by 1,500 majority. A will, disposing of nearly $100,000 worth of property, is being contested in the Courts in Louisville, Ky., by the children and heirs-at-law of the testator, to none of whom was devised any part of his estate. The grounds relied on are that the testator was the subject of apoplexy some nineteen years ago, which caused a permanent and fatal lesion in his brain, affecting and impairing his mind in a material degree, and especially causing him to be subject to delusive suspicions, resulting in disagreements and obstinate dislikes to his wife, children, family physician, and many of his former nearest and best friends.

The Oswego Press of Thursday evening gives this little story of an elopement in this State: "EMMA, daughter of CHARLES ALDRICH, a respectable farmer who lives near Texas, town of Mexico, Oswego County, eloped last evening with H. L. MYERS, a young merchant of Texas. She was to have been married at 7 o'clock last evening to one FILLMORE, a somewhat aged but wealthy Californian. The guests assembled, and the parson attended, but the bride to be was not on hand. It was said she left the house toward evening, under pretense of going out where the men were gathering sap, which was the last seen of her. MYERS had formerly paid his addresses to Miss ALDRICH. The wedding dresses were left behind and are without a wearer."

End of a Libel Suit Against a St. Louis Paper.

From the St. Louis Republican, March 7.

The libel suit of the Missouri State Lottery against the Republican, for $200,000 has been dismissed by the plaintiffs, before we had even employed a lawyer to defend it. This is unusually considerate on the part of the lottery men, but their troubles are not likely to cease on that account. The Chief of Police has begun the year for forecasting which we were sued, he not having been dismayed by the threatened attack upon the Press; and notwithstanding the withdrawal of the prosecution against us we are ungrateful enough to hope the lottery business will be effectually squelched.

Southern Families Removing to Kansas.

From the Cincinnati Chronicle, March 7.

The present year promises to be the most active ever known in the settlement of the Great West. Almost daily large companies of emigrants from the East and South, and not a few from foreign parts, pass through this city en route to the sections they have chosen for their future home. Kansas seems to be the favorite spot, and we oftener see emigrants for that section than for any other.

All day yesterday and last night members of a new colony being formed for Rice County, situated in the south-western portion of Kansas, continued to arrive from Portland, Jackson County, West Va. In all there were between 200 and 300 persons, of whom one-half were married. This number was still further increased this morning by the arrival of four or six additional families, and at noon today the entire company departed by special train, on the Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Lafayette Railroad, taking their stock, provisions, household goods, &c., with them. Under a special arrangement, each person is carried from Portland, Jackson County, Va., to Kansas City, on the Missouri River, for $13.

A large number accompany the expedition who do not expect to settle in the West at once, but who propose traveling over the country, taking notes and laying plans for future operations. An advance colony of twenty-six families was some time since sent out, and these reporting favorably to the head-quarters at Tauranac, the remainder of the colony was called in from Gallia County, and the day before that appointed for departure over 500 certificates had been issued. This number includes both sexes and all ages.

NOTES FROM THE PEOPLE.

Levying Black-Mail on Office-Holders.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I am an office-holder in this City, and the salary attached to the office is barely adequate to the support of myself and family in unpretending style. I am taxed for the support of the Democratic Party, am daily assailed to contribute to Democratic balls, charities, funerals, widows and orphans, and target associations, and threatened with removal should I decline. Yesterday I received a circular from the Tweed Testimonial Association, inviting me to contribute to the fund for the erection of a statue of Hon. WILLIAM M. TWEED "for his services to the Commonwealth of New-York." It strikes me that however stupendous may have been the services of that distinguished patriot, that they have not altogether been self-sacrificing, for he is said to concede that he has segregated from the commonwealth of the City of New-York, during the past three years, the unpretending sum of $7,000,000. The public crib has sustained him for the past fifteen years.

What am I to do? On one side I am informed that, unless I substantially respond to the invitation, I am a marked man, and "down goes my house." On the other hand, I am told (and fain would believe) that the distinguished Senator has said that no office-holder's subscription would be received—that the testimonial must succeed by the spontaneous and enlightened gratitude of the citizens of this great State—or, failing to meet with such recognition, he would not make up any deficit in the estimated cost out of his own pocket!

But, aside from the Tweed testimonial, it is said that the Controller, the Big Judge, Alderman COMAN, GRATZ NATHAN and Judges SHANDLEY and LEDWITH are to have a statute or a bust, and even the Hon. THOMAS C. FIELDS yearns to be perpetuated, not in brass, but in marble, provided that the quarries shall not have been exhausted in perpetuating the outlines of the portly Senator who has served the Commonwealth.

Will not all these testimonials exacted for distinguished services ruin Democratic office-holders? ONE OF THEM.

A Leather Medal for Mr. Tom Fields.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

At a meeting of the constituents of TOM FIELDS, held last evening, they unanimously voted to present him with a leather medal, which was purchased and sent to Hon. WM. HITCHMAN, to be presented to FIELDS, to-morrow, in the Assembly, as a token of our appreciation of his efforts in the Saint Paddy bill.

THOMAS A. COMER, Secretary.

NEW-YORK, Friday, March 10, 1871.

The Appraiser's Office.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In reply to the Appraiser's answer to my charge of wanton injury done to apparatus in the Appraiser's office, I would state that previous to seeing the letter of Messrs. MARSH & SPITZER, in your issue of the 7th, I had taken steps to have the matter brought before the notice of the Appraiser of the Port through some influential friends. I will merely add that I shall send to the Appraiser affidavit from the messenger of the Adams Express Company to the effect that all the boxes containing the apparatus had the official seal of the Appraiser on them when he delivered them. I shall also send the affidavits of the carpenter who opened the boxes, and of my assistant, who aided him, to the effect that these boxes all had on them the official seal of the Appraiser; and that they removed these seals, which I have now by me. Their affidavits will also state that the mahogany box in question had had its bottom wrenched off, and that the box was broken in so doing, and that it was quite empty, all its contents having been removed. They will also state there were no marks on the box containing the piece of apparatus to indicate that it had been received in bad order. All I know is, that my apparatus was ruined, and that the boxes containing it had not been opened after leaving the Appraiser's office.

This is my answer to the Appraiser's letter in your issue of the 7th inst. As my name will become known to the Appraisers during the investigation of this matter, it is needless for me to furnish them with it now. A. B.

THOMAS HANGED.

The Murder of Walter Johnson Explained on the Gallows—Last Hours of the Doomed Man—History of his Case—The Final Scene.

JOHN THOMAS ROSENVILLE, commonly called JOHN THOMAS, who has lain in the City Prison, under sentence of death, since January last, suffered the full penalty of the law at a few minutes after 9 o'clock yesterday morning.

THE CRIME.

ROSENVILLE was a Haytian by birth, and, like most natives of the isle, was not a full-blooded African. He was thirty-five years of age. In early life he found employment in the family of a colored gentleman of Hayti, who has since represented the Republic in the United States. Later, he became a sailor. On land and at sea he showed intelligence, and was held in fair repute. While sojourning in Hayti, ROSENVILLE wedded a colored woman whom he afterward brought to this City. He continued to earn a livelihood by plying between Hayti and New-York, but finally he made the latter place his abode. Among his numerous acquaintances was WALTER JOHNSON, also a colored man. For him ROSENVILLE soon begot a decided dislike. On the 30th of September last, ROSENVILLE, partially intoxicated, met one HALSEY, and told him that he would take JOHNSON's life that night and afterwards kill himself. The men came together when the night was more advanced, and after a few angry words had passed, ROSENVILLE shot JOHNSON dead. The murderer was arrested at once.

TRIAL AND SENTENCE.

The trial was begun on Dec. 28 in the Court of Oyer and Terminer, Judge CARDOZO was on the Bench, and while District-Attorney GARVIN and Assistant District-Attorney TWEED appeared for the prosecution, Messrs. GOELET and ROOME offered the defense. The proceedings were brief. Eight witnesses only were examined. Their evidence caused the jury, without leaving their seats, to find the prisoner guilty. The sentence rendered was to have been executed on the 17th of February. Through the efforts of counsel, however, the condemned man was reprieved for three weeks by Gov. HOFFMAN, and on the 23d of February an argument for a new trial was made before Judges INGRAHAM, BARNARD and CARDOZO, in the Supreme Court. On the 27th of February Judge INGRAHAM delivered an opinion, denying the application for a new trial. An application was made to the Court of Appeals with a similar result. A few days ago Gov. HOFFMAN declined to further prevent the law from taking its course, and an appeal for a stay of proceedings, addressed to Chief-Justice CHURCH at Albany, was also rejected.

IN DURESS.

ROSENVILLE's behavior during his term of incarceration was exemplary. He was frequently visited by his wife, by his little girl, aged eleven years, for whom he had a passionate love; by Mrs. RACSTER, wife of the Haytian Minister, and by Miss O'REILLY. Spiritual consolation was administered by Rev. Father DURANQUET, whose conversations with the deceased man were carried on in French. From all that can be learned, these do not seem to have wholly soothed ROSENVILLE's latest hours. His last night on earth was sleepless. With the permission of the Deputy Sheriffs on duty, the man left his cell and walked the corridor into which it opened from 11 o'clock on Thursday night until about 3 on Friday morning. At 4, ROSENVILLE re-entered his cell and knelt before a small altar raised within it. He then seated himself on his cot, but failing to attain the repose, he once more fell to pacing the entry. Pausing before the door, but one remark. "Oh!" he exclaimed, "could I but walk the decks of a ship again." Meantime, the chapel in the women's prison was made ready, and at day break ROSENVILLE, with Father DURANQUET, Deputy Warden MARK FINLEY, Mrs. RACSTER, Miss REILLY, and Mrs. JONES, heard the mass for the departing soul. The prisoner afterward bade farewell to his child and to Mrs. RACSTER.

OUTSIDE SCENES.

The gloominess of the scene outside the prison tiers was in unison with the darkness within. The rain fell intermittently, but the leaden skies were unchanging, and a heavy atmosphere made breathing really oppressive. The preparations for the close of the drama differed in no respect from those of previous affairs of the same order. The drab frame, with the Manila rope dangling between the uprights, the noose, knot of badly cut and unplaned boards, concealing the hangman and the weights; the planks forming a slippery floor over the flags; the rough inclined planes of pine, intended for desks; the canvas awning, shutting out the heaven and ill-warding off the rain; all the paraphernalia, described time and again, was once more in evidence. Long lines of policemen inclosed the prison without, and the ground, dignified by the title of special deputies, was parted from the gallows by an equally efficient cordon. Although it is averred that efforts were made to reduce the number of the spectators, about 300 were present. The barber of the Tombs, a colored man, was among them. And he was at the request of ROSENVILLE selected, at the same time that no other colored man should be admitted. There were no witnesses of the hanging but persons provided with the needed authorization. The Court of Special Sessions was adjourned for the morning, and especial care had been taken that prisoners should not profit by the spectacle by means of bits of mirror adapted to the windows of their cells.

THE PENALTY.

At 8¾ o'clock the assemblage facing the tall frame and standing beside it gave way before a coffin which was borne into the woman's prison. In it lay the remains of ROSENVILLE. Two assistants were pinioning the arms of ROSENVILLE with a slender rope. Sheriff BRENNAN and Under Sheriff JOEL O. STEVENS were present, with Father DURANQUET. After a brief prayer the small cortege advanced. A half-stifled cry of "hats off" was heard as it came forth into the air and slowly approached the covered spot. As the prisoner stood under the noose, side by side with Father DURANQUET, a heavy shower set in. ROSENVILLE, who was tall and broad-shouldered, had a straightness of frame of Greene, and cited authorities on the point that any person can waive a condition inserted in an agreement for his own benefit. On the trial in the Court below judgment was given for the plaintiff. The defendant then appealed to the General Term of the Court of Queen's, which, after argument, the judgment was affirmed.

Strong & Shepard for plaintiffs; W. S. Hornsfager for defendant.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

A London telegram says the Eastern Conference was not in session yesterday. An Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs admitted in Parliament, yesterday, that the intervention of Great Britain between Germany and France was offered through the German Ambassador in London a fortnight ago, and was still unanswered. ....The officers of the National Guard of Belleville, Paris, called upon Gen. DE PALLADINES, yesterday, and left apparently satisfied with their interview. A train of wounded Germans, returning home, was run into on Thursday, by a freight train, and nineteen cars broken up. The number of killed and wounded is not reported. ....VICTOR EMMANUEL says the letter ascribed to him, expressing surprise at the terms of peace imposed by Germany, is a forgery.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, the absorbing topic of discussion was the proposed displacement of Senator SUMNER from the head of the Committee on Foreign Relations, which was opposed by Mr. SUMNER himself in declining to serve on the Committee on Privileges and Elections. The resolution was finally adopted by a vote of 30 to 9, Senators SCHURZ, TIPTON, TRUMBULL and WILSON not voting.

In the House, yesterday, bills were introduced to enable discharged soldiers and sailors and their widows to acquire homesteads on public lands, to abolish the franking privilege, and for a committee to investigate the subject of the Mississippi levees. Mr. DAWES introduced a Deficiency bill, to cover some expenditures not provided for by the general appropriations. The salt duty came up under a motion to limit discussion to forty-five minutes. The proposition to reduce the duty was temporarily defeated by opposing members offering resolutions that coffee, tea, lumber, timber, potatoes, barley and malt be placed on the free list, with other propositions that only served to load the salt question. The matter finally ended in Mr. KELLEY offering, as an amendment to the entire question, the present Tariff law, which so disgusted the House that it adjourned without definite action until Monday.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

Among the bills passed in the Senate yesterday, was that to appoint a Board of Examiners of the qualifications of drug clerks in New-York. The Senate adjourned to Monday evening. ....In the Assembly, the Brooklyn Police bill was reported by the Kings County delegation, with an amendment reducing the pay of patrolmen from $1,200 to $1,000, and as amended was passed. The House also adjourned till Monday evening.

Advices from the City of Mexico to the 3d inst., state that Gov. PESQUEIRA of Sonora, has been added to the list of presidential candidates, making four nominated, with two more spoken of. The Governor of Jalisco has been deposed. Minister NELSON had addressed the General Government on the subject of ill-treatment suffered by American citizens from the Governor of Oaxaca. A defalcation of $1,600,000 had been discovered in the Treasury Department, and Señor ROMERO is to resign. An act of accusation against President JUAREZ is to be drawn up by the Central Club of the Capitol. It is feared that the existing election troubles will end in revolution.

Advices from Hayti state that the Salnave party have made several unsuccessful revolutionary movements at Port-au-Prince. The popularity of the new Government is represented as too great to be affected by these riots. Crops in Porto Rico are reported heavy.

Mail advices from Venezuela represent continued opposition to the Government in the Eastern Departments near Barcelona. The Government forces had, however, proved successful in putting down the insurrection. It was understood that the fleet anchored at Puerto Cabello was to be sold to the Cubans.

Mount Rainier, in Washington Territory, is reported to be in a state of apparent activity, the heat being so great as to melt the snow, and there is a constant emission of steam and smoke from the crater.

Recent advices from Fiji Islands represent affairs as in an unsettled condition. The King offered the City of Liverka a charter, but the inhabitants were so jealous of the establishment of a Police force that the meeting to adopt it was broken up, and the town is now governed solely as the chiefs dictate.

The Treasury Department will receive Five-twenty bonds from holders desiring to anticipate the issue of new bonds and pay interest on the surrendered bonds to the 1st of May next, without rebate, and issue certificates enabling the holders to receive the new bonds.

Maryland has 13 schools, and 16 teachers; Virginia, 14 schools, and 22 teachers; North Carolina, 1 school, and 3 teachers; South Carolina, 11 schools, and 26 teachers; Georgia, 1 school, and 5 teachers. North and South Carolina, Virginia and Maryland are adopting a liberal school system irrespective of color. The receipts of the Society for the year exceed $80,000. Gov. CLAFLIN was re-elected President of the Society.

The Trenton Gazette denies the report that Gov. RANDOLPH has been asked to arbitrate in the coal difficulties.

The Coroner's jury in the Van Hoosen homicide, in Albany, returned a verdict that HEWENETTA VAN HOOSEN came to her death by injuries inflicted by her husband, L. P. VAN HOOSEN, while he was of unsound mind, and incapable of judging right from a wrong action.

A meeting of citizens, interested in free canals, was held on the Exchange, in Buffalo, yesterday.

The First National Bank of Bangor, Me., has subscribed for $300,000 new Government loan.

The Executive Committee of the German Peace Convention, which is to make arrangements for the Peace Jubilee, was in session at Liederkranz Hall, yesterday, to prepare a programme, which is to be submitted at the next meeting of the Committee. STERRY; Eleventh Regiment, Col. FUNK; New-York Schuetzen Battalion, Major HENKLER; New-York Independent Schuetzen Corps, Capt. F. F. DIEHL, Jr.; and the New-York Turner Schuetzen, Capt. CHARLES FRESE.

We are indebted to the Captain of the Hamburg-American steam-ship Westphalia for late and valued additions to our English and Continental files.

The City Government and Its Defenders.

The great question which the Evening Post and other advocates of TWEED's administration carefully avoid is this—are there or are there not ascertained abuses in the government of the City? Will the Post, for instance, tell us what is the debt of the City at this moment? Such information ought to be accessible to all the citizens. Its deliberate suppression is in itself a proof that something is going on which will not bear the light of day. Bonds have been issued to a very large amount, and no account whatever is rendered of the money represented by them. The Post says that the Mayor promises to furnish the accounts in April, and it argues as if that promise completely exculpated the City Government from all the charges brought against it. But, surely, we have a right to say, "Let us see the figures first before you demand a verdict of not guilty. It will be time enough to assert that there is nothing in our charges against the City Government when they have been disproved."

The Post raises a great cloud of words about the support which it alleges we gave to the new Charter. Whatever may have been the measure of that support, we do our duty in denouncing the working of the Charter now that we know it is injurious to the people. The Charter is proved to be a fraud, and we condemn it. The Post knows it to be a fraud, and goes on defending it. That is the main difference between us. No journal is bound to go on for ever supporting a measure which has been turned against the community, and which it is well known was obtained by false pretenses. There was a distinct pledge given that the Central Park Commission should not be tampered with. Yet it was completely falsified, and SWEENY and T. FIELDS were placed in virtual command of the Park. This is only one instance of bad faith, but it is a fair type of all the rest.

The Post talks in a way becoming a simpleton about our being able to "hold the present Mayor accountable for the City administration." A good deal he cares for your holding him accountable! In the same spirit it quotes the testimony of the Citizens' Association to the effect that there has been a reform of abuses in the Tax Office under Mr. NATHANIEL SANDS. That is to say, it offers Mr. NATHANIEL SANDS' certificate to his own character as a convincing proof of his honesty. That beats the certificate of the Astor-Taylor Committee. If every trickster is to be allowed to whitewash himself it will be very easy to prove that there are none but upright men left in the world. It is a little too much, at this time of day, to ask us to take Mr. SANDS at the valuation he puts upon himself. That course may do very well for the Post, which is fed with the City advertisements through the mediation of Mr. SANDS, but it cannot deceive any rational person in the community.

It is notorious that the affairs of the City are in the hands of four men, three of whom, at least, are known to have made large fortunes in a surprisingly short space of time, and made them by applying the public money to their own uses. Frauds of all kinds are committed on every side of us, and yet the Post would have us believe that our affairs could not be in better hands. Does any man who has looked into the facts believe that TWEED and SWEENY are fit men to be intrusted with irresponsible powers over this or any other City? The wild and almost childish talk of the Post cannot blind the public to the fact that public life has been degraded, the Bench corrupted, the public moneys misappropriated, bad men put into office, good ones kept out, and the whole City abandoned to every form of misgovernment and corruption—and all owing to the active work of men whom a Democratic paper distinctly branded as swindlers. The Post may go on crying out that it is "all right," but the community will continue to believe that it is "all wrong," and never cease to make war upon the whole system until substantial reforms are effected.

Mr. Sumner.

There can be no doubt that the removal of Mr. SUMNER from the Committee on Foreign Affairs is a very unfortunate event—but Republican Senators, no less faithful, if less distinguished, than Mr. SUMNER himself, have arrived at the conclusion that the step was absolutely necessary, and therefore it is nonsense to attempt to saddle the President with the whole, or even the chief, responsibility for it. Mr. SUMNER, it has been positively stated, had refused to speak to the Secretary of State; but yesterday the statement was qualified, and it was alleged that Mr. SUMNER had not declined to hold official communications with Mr. FISH. An important part of the business of the country would be seriously embarrassed if the Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations persisted in maintaining an attitude of irreconcilable hostility to the Secretary of State and the Administration. Mr. SUMNER is not a man of partial likes or dislikes. He does one or the other with his whole heart. Other Senators, certainly, ought to be allowed some freedom of choice in making up their Committees, and to suppose that they have submitted to the imperious dictation of the President on the subject is to insult the Senators, and to take a very improbable view of the whole case. It is evident, however, that a large section of the Republican Party will regard Mr. SUMNER as a martyr to his opinions, and for that reason alone we cannot but regret that Republican Senators should have felt themselves compelled in duty to find another Chairman for the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Republican Prospects in France.

Paris is possessed with its old frenzy again. The overshadowing danger, in presence of which party clamor was stilled, has passed, and a vague unrest, born of a despairing consciousness how impotent has been their resistance to a relentless enemy, seems to have taken hold of the populace. In default of the Prussians, the "Reds" want somebody to wreak their vengeance on. France, and, above all, Paris, has suffered a great defeat and a great humiliation, and yet nobody can be found on whom to lay the blame. At Bordeaux, the people have been calmly voting away provinces and huge indemnities that will absorb the spare earnings of a generation, but there is no talk of impeaching anybody, unless, perhaps, the Emperor, who is already as good as dead; there is no new oath of the tennis-court by which the popular Deputies should, this time, bind themselves to remain in session till means were devised for taking revenge upon the foe,—who seems to the mind's eye much less formidable now that his field artillery and his intrenchments are no longer contracting the circle of fate round the city. The suppressed fury of the proletariat of the capital has, therefore, begun the familiar series of fitful outbursts, which, unrestrained by a strong hand and a vigorous will, may lead to revolution and chaos again.

Fortunately for France, the patriots of Montmartre and Belleville cannot just yet work any serious mischief. The Government is strong in resting upon the deliberate choice of the people, and in being backed by a large majority of the representatives of the provinces who are tired of the dictation of Paris, and many of whom are prepared to support the proposal of removing the political capital somewhere else. They are also strong from the fact that a sincere desire to maintain Republican institutions is visible in all their measures. Could M. THIERS and his colleagues be convicted of plotting for a monarchy, a revolutionary protest would be intelligible, and might be exceedingly difficult to deal with. But all their acts, of which we have any record, show a punctilious desire to maintain Republican forms, and an honest determination to give popular government a fair trial. M. THIERS insisted upon the insertion of the word "Republic" in the resolution of the Deputies which forms the warrant of his office. He retains three Republicans in his Ministry, who would not hold office for a single day were they to be required to assist in an Orleans restoration.

By some such reasons as these, emphasized no doubt by a reference to the readiness of his cannon, Gen. DE PALLADINES managed on Thursday to bring the mutinous officers of the national guards of Belleville to reason. France has shown her willingness to be ruled by moderate counsels, and the sooner Paris reaches a similar resolution, the more rapidly will proceed the peaceful reconstruction which the country so urgently needs. It is time that Frenchmen recognised the fact, that grievously betrayed as they have been, they have suffered chiefly because they were untrue to themselves. For two generations neither Conservatives nor Radicals have been capable of compromise or of gradual reform. The political life of the nation has thus alternated between repression and license, and has been devoted to the worship of every possible idea—Legitimist, Orleanist, Republican, and Imperialist—to the exclusion of the idea of true liberty. Evidences are not wanting that France has profited by sad experience, and that the Thiers Ministry embodies her attachment to practical results in preference to vague aspirations, to republicanism that respects the rights of all in preference to a régime that gives either a man or a mob an irresponsible and absolute power.

A Generous Ghost.

Marshal TURENNE asserted, as a conviction derived from long experience, that in the dark all men are cowards, and the sturdiest scoffer by daylight has very often hesitated to take a short cut through a grave-yard at midnight. Whether or not disembodied spirits are ever really permitted to "revisit the pale glimpses of the moon," is a question about which mankind reason one way, and feel another. But that many persons insist that they have seen apparitions, is a fact too well authenticated for dispute. A correspondent not long since sent us a circumstantial account of some extraordinary supernatural experiences which befell Major GORDON, an English officer, and an ill-mannered spectre has been for some time past tormenting Rev. Mr. THRASHER, of Buchanan, Va. Usually these tricksy spirits appear only for the purpose of working harm or annoyance to those whom they visit. It is therefore quite reassuring to read of so good-natured and benevolent a ghost as that which has lately agitated the serenity of Memphis.

It is a wealthy ghost, and has taken the trouble to come back to earth merely for the purpose of bestowing its material possessions on a young lady who has taken its fancy. The object of this polite attention is a pupil at the Brinckley Female College, and is described as a girl of nervous temperament, in delicate health, and about thirteen years of age. Had she alone seen the vision, it might easily have been explained as a morbid phantasy. But unlike the custom of these "coy citizens of the air," the Memphis apparition has readily manifested itself to numbers of veracious witnesses, though less plainly than to the especial object of its regard. For instance, after several private views of her strange friend, this young lady, being in the music-room with two companions, "was startled by an unusual noise, as of water being dashed over the floor." Turning, she was saluted by the agreeable spectacle of a "girl about eight years of age, with sunken, lustreless eyes and strikingly emaciated form and features—virtually a skeleton in appearance and seemingly transparent." In singular contrast with the munificence which it afterward displayed, the vision "was clad in a dingy and tattered dress of faded pink, partly covered with" that latest device in spectral fashions, "a greenish and slimy fold." So attired, it is scarcely to be wondered at that "a sad expression rested upon the features of the strange visitor." Miss CLARA, we are told, saw the shape distinctly, while to her friends "it appeared rather shadowy."

The girls ran away and brought down the music-teacher, who found the accommodating goblin waiting for her arrival. She, too, saw the figure imperfectly, and "heard a rambling noise" in answer to a question as to what it wanted. Miss CLARA, however, and another pupil distinctly heard it say that, "under a stump, some fifty yards from the house, were secreted some valuables, which it would have Miss CLARA take possession of and use to her own advantage." These valuables, on a subsequent interview, were declared to be the title deeds of the Brinckley College property, which the goblin girl asserted was hers, and which she wished to make over to her mortal friend. It added the somewhat indefinite information, "in a mild, pleasant tone," that its name was LIZZIE. Afterward it gave its surname as DAVISON. The culmination of this curious affair, which has created as much excitement among the feminine population of Memphis as the mysterious stabber in Williamsburg, is that the father of the child called in the services of a spiritual "medium." Under her ministrations Miss CLARA first swooned, and then wrote the most astonishing communications from her unearthly benefactor. Among other disclosures, which it is thought imprudent to publish, the goblin made the uncomfortable threat that if the parties now in possession of the property refuse to give it up, "it will take care that they get no good from it." The paper on which these revelations are written, is said to be in the office of the Avalanche, which vouches for this part of the story. It is gratifying, yet tantalising to know that at last accounts the stump was in process of excavation, and the diggers had struck a brick-work arch.

At this point our information ends, and we are left in suspense as to the result of the investigation. In the meantime it must be admitted that this is a remarkable occurrence, even in ghostly annals. A spectre which leaves the tomb to indulge in the luxury of giving away estates to strange little girls is as unprecedented as unwelcome to the holders of property. How far such a conveyance would be valid in law, hardly Judge EDMONDS himself could decide. Perhaps the easiest solution of this Memphis mystery would be that it is a clever hoax. In any event, its dénouement will be awaited with interest.

The Baptists and the City Bribe.

The expression of our opinion with regard to the acceptance of that land grant from the City by the Baptist Alms-house Society, seems to have disagreed with our reverend brother of the Examiner and Chronicle. He tells us that our remarks were "flippant and impudent." Well, that is very sad. Nevertheless, our remarks were true, and time will fully justify every word we said. The acceptance of those lots by the Baptist ladies, who were urged thereto by the editor of their most influential denominational paper, has given the death-blow to all hopes of reform with regard to subsidising religion. All efforts to stop the flow of public property into sectarian channels are likely to be in vain, now that so conspicuous a precedent has been established. The Methodist ladies are already exercised over this very subject, and a discussion is going on among them as to the acceptance of some lots that have been offered them. Their clergy have given good advice in the matter, but it is not at all likely that good advice will prevent the foul and fatal consent being given.

This is a matter in which precedent counts for everything, and a fatal precedent has been supplied. The Baptists must take the responsibility of having done more to gratify the Ring, and endow the Roman Catholic Church in this City, than had previously been done by any Protestant communion. The little sop thrown to them, and hastily snatched at, closes their mouths against the giving away of whole squares to that Church, which, by its votes, virtually controls New-York. And the same act will have its mischievous influence upon the other Protestant sects, who hitherto have withstood the blandishments of the City Government, and protested against this alienation of City property to sectarian purposes. That the lion's share will gravitate inevitably and always to the Romanists, while an occasional trifle is thrown to the rest, no one can doubt. And, when after years of this sort of thing, the balance comes to be struck, it will be seen how one-sided the distribution has really been, and how cheaply the Protestant recipients have sold their honor.

Rev. Dr. DEWITT, and the most respectable clergymen and laymen who signed the letter printed by us the other day, probed the question to its very quick when they said: "It would certainly be a shrewd device of our rulers to enlist the great Baptist denomination in the defense of their system of religious gifts." Against the counsels of those to whom we all are accustomed to listen with reverence and respect, and in the face of general public opinion, this "great Baptist denomination" has, by the act and votes of a paltry few of its members, "enlisted itself" on the side of the crafty Ring. It may be "flippant and impudent" in us to say this, but the fact is obvious to every one.

We regret that the Baptists have pioneered this reactionary and demoralizing movement; for, considering their grand old record of sturdiness as against the encroachments and seductions of secular power, this sale of their birthright for a mess of pottage is utterly inexcusable. But the deed is done, and there can be but one more discreditable thing behind, and that is the attempt to palliate the wrong-doing, or shirk its responsibility. In spite of the disclaimer of the Examiner and Chronicle, we repeat that we have good reason to know that the body of the Baptist denomination repudiates the action taken by these ladies and their few friends, and not to adduce any other proof of this fact, we ask Rev. Dr. BRIGHT to note that the comments made by Boston and Philadelphia Baptist papers upon this transaction place his paper in a position of solitude in sustaining this scheme of fraternization with the Ring.

The Old Lady and Her Hens.

Solitude often leads to the adoption of strange pets, just as misery brings acquaintance with strange bed-fellows. The rats and mice, and even insects, that have become the cherished companions of prisoners and hermits, are honored in many cases with special record, and furnish instructive examples of the consoling intimacy that may exist between man and the humblest created beings. Of birds that have brought, as it were, gleams of sunshine through the bars of a dungeon, there are numerous anecdotes. Birds, indeed, are the most poetic of our favorites. Yet there are degrees of romance attaching to the different species, the lowest of which seem very commonplace indeed. How strange, for example, appears the idea of fixing one's affections on a hen! Even of this, however, there have been instances, and an account of the most remarkable of which we have ever heard, has lately come to us from Martha's Vineyard.

On that primitive and sequestered island, and in one of its most lonely and out-of-the-way nooks, there lives an old lady whose whole life is devoted to hens. She is with them morning, noon, and night. She shares with them the anxieties of incubation, and exults with them when the loud cry of joy announces its happy climax. She gives to each of her cherished fowls a separate name, watches with tender care the development of its nature, guides, and sometimes inspires its budding affection, and—the story comes to us well authenticated—when it dies erects a marble tombstone over its remains. The poor soul lives by the desolate sea shore, and, it seems, has no one to cling to in the world but these feathered pets of hers. Her name is NANCY LUCE, and in youth she is said to have been "a belle, a beauty, and a famous horsewoman." In those days her troth was plighted to a certain dashing sea-captain. He showed, alas! the proverbial inconstancy of his calling. He was bright and gay as the waves of a Summer sea—and as fickle. The simple country girl of Martha's Vineyard was forsaken at last for the daughter of a Consul at one of the ports of sunny Spain. Not long after, NANCY's father and mother died and left her, so far as human companionship goes, quite alone. In the way of worldly possessions they bequeathed her the rocky old farm where the family had been born, had lived, and died; and from that day to this she has led there the life of a recluse.

NANCY's hens are her chief support, as well as her sole companions. She cooks most of their food, and they are scarcely ever absent from her side. As a natural consequence, some of them exhibit extraordinary sagacity, the illustrations of which might have been of great value to Mr. DARWIN in preparing his latest work. NANCY has a profound admiration for Mr. BAGEH, and takes more interest in him and his proceedings than in anything else in the outer world. She has prepared a will in which she directs that her body shall be buried among her favorite hens on a spot that overlooks the sea. All their marble tombstones are to be preserved, and her own added to them. In such company, and in sight of the element on which her false lover sailed away from her, the poor old lady hopes at last to sleep. Of course there is something in this simple tale to provoke a smile; but there is something, likewise, that is very pathetic. The love and sympathy she failed to obtain from her kind, this solitary woman sought among such of Heaven's creatures as were in contact with her, whose companionship she could always secure, and whose affection she could always propitiate. The resource was humble enough, no doubt; but worse have been sought in affliction; and if poor NANCY LUCE's passion is in any sense a weakness, it is at least of the amiable kind that does no wrong to others, and will cause to be associated with her memory neither a pang nor a stain.

MINOR TOPICS.

The Forty-second Congress bids fair to have, in common with its predecessor, the fault of defeating its good intentions by overdoing them. The Committee of the Whole began the discussion of the salt duty with some dignity and no little firmness. Yesterday's treatment of the question was painfully deficient in both. There must be a pretty large proportion of honorable members who lack the boldness to vote squarely against the repeal of oppressive and unnecessary duties, and yet who embrace every opportunity to aid in retaining them by having their consideration embarrassed by half-a-dozen matters utterly irrelevant to the main question. The simple resolution to do one thing at a time would have been sufficient to conduct the House to a vote on the salt duty in a very short time. The way in which the original proposal has now been overloaded makes it in the last degree doubtful whether it can be disposed of at all during the opening session of Congress.

If anybody still clings to the belief that in this City and State we enjoy the privileges of popular Government, a little attention to the course of legislation at Albany ought to be sufficient to undeceive him. The Park Commission gets the control of at least a million and a half; the Department of Public Works is authorized to raise a similar sum with scarce the formality of explanation, and not the slightest attempt at discussion. TWEED has willed it, so reason all-sufficient why the tax-payers should be made to carry fresh burdens. Nobody believes that half of the money will ever reach the purposes for which it is voted, and nobody expects that by anything short of a revolution the public will get access to the records of their own indebtedness. Paris under HAUSSMANN was treated with more consideration than this. And yet citizens can be found willing to beg the Legislature to hand the unrestricted power of raising revenues over to TWEED and his cronies.

The Republican members of the Assembly must be branded with participation in the iniquity of Erie if one man is left single-handed to fight against the gigantic wrong. Concerted action among the Republican members might or might not affect the result of the present movement for the repeal of an infamous bill; but it would have the advantage of enabling us to judge how much Erie counts upon the corruptibility of Republican members, as well as how certainly its tenure of power is based upon the Democratic majority.

If, as a cable telegram asserts, the first instalment of the German indemnity can be raised solely in France, it will enable the new Government to contract a loan to cover the remainder on terms much more advantageous than it could otherwise have done. As pointed out by a financial journal, the transfer of so large a quantity of bullion to Germany will cause a temporary pressure, and consequent rise of values in other markets. The duration of this must, of course, depend upon the use to which the German Government puts its newly acquired specie. If lodged with the banks, the natural monetary level will be very soon reached; if locked up in the national treasury, it may affect rates of interest and exchange for some time.

The price fixed by the existing contract for cleaning the streets in this City is $800,000. In addition to this paltry sum of $10,000 a week, the street-cleaning business is carried on by the Board of Health and the Department of Public Works, so that the aggregate payments coming out of the Treasury presided over by Hon. RICHARD B. CONNOLLY, and charged to this account during the past year, are currently reported to have exceeded a million and a quarter dollars. Notwithstanding the combined exertions of this triple organization, small-pox, fever, and other diseases arising from the filthy condition of the streets are making havoc among our population. In spite also of all received and of palpable inefficiency, the payments upon the regular street-cleaning contract are made with the same regularity as if it had been properly performed. The public have some right to know, at least, who receives the money. That the contract really is owned by parties high in office is a matter which is generally conceded by those familiar with public affairs, but precisely who those parties are is intended to be kept a mystery. Will not Mr. CONNOLLY favor the public with their names? If public report does not belie him, he need not go far to find the name of one of the most prominent, and that one is perfectly familiar with the names of the others interested.

Mr. DISRAELI, at the opening of the British Parliament, took occasion to advert to what he considered a lack of courtesy in our diplomatic intercourse with Great Britain. It would appear, from the ministerial admission made yesterday in the House of Commons, that Count BISMARCK treats the British Foreign Office with even less consideration than the leader of the opposition charged our Government with displaying. An offer of mediation on the part of the English Cabinet was made a fortnight ago through the Prussian Ambassador in London to the German Chancellor at Versailles. No notice has as yet been taken of the communication. Whatever be the future policy of the German leaders it is perfectly clear that a desire to conciliate England does not form an element in their programme.

It is instructive to note that the Prussian Press, which never ventures upon the general discussion of an international topic, without official approval, either expressed or implied, has taken up the subject of the Baltic Provinces. "Russification" is being carried on there to an extent which their German population considers oppressive. Just before the late war the same topic was being publicly discussed, and, in spite of the secret treaty, and of reciprocal obligations between the Courts of Berlin and St. Petersburg, we find the subject at the close of the war as vital as ever. A late speech of a Russian General at Riga, is severely commented on. It contained the following sentence: "ALEXANDER I. freed Russia from the French, ALEXANDER II. from the Poles, and ALEXANDER III. will rid her of the Germans." If this declaration represents a national policy, the entente cordiale between Russia and Germany will be of short duration.

ALBANY.

Two Netherlands Reformers Hunted Through the Senate to the Confusion of Adjournment—The Enthusiasm at Work with Hotel Temperance Resolutions.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, N. Y., Friday, March 10, 1871.

The great anxiety to get away from their duties that characterizes all bodies that convene at this capital, prevailed this morning. At no time does dangerous legislation so prosper as in these hours of excitement and departure. This morning was no exception to the rule, and as the hour of closing approached the Senate rushed through, entirely without debate, two of the most important bills of the year. The one fathered Senator TWEED provides for the extension of the distributing pipes of the Croton, the laying of mains and other necessary acts to enable the Mayor, Alderman and Commonalty of New-York to expend $8,360,000; the other to so improve and regulate the public parks of New-York that an excuse may be formed for saddling the overtaxed residents of that City with a new burden, whose amount is only limited by the power of one hundred thousand dollars to pay its interest. These bills were introduced, the one on the 6th, the other on the 9th of March, and have gone through with that wonderful speed that characterizes every financial arrangement in legislation that is introduced by the very solipsos gentlemen who govern the population of Manhattan Island.

HERE.

The Erie Directors bill still remains in the Committee, notwithstanding Mr. GOODRICH's effort to obtain them to report. This morning Gov. ALVORD opened a new leaf in the book of opposition, by introducing the protest of some twenty citizens of Syracuse in favor of the passage of the bill. In the Senate, however, are two directors of the road, and in all parts of the lobby are powers working for its retention.

MAINE LAW.

More temperance demands come from the rural districts. One, this morning presented by Mr. COON, of Schuylkill, calls upon the Legislature to approach civilization, and that, inasmuch as his august Majesty, the Emperor of Turkey, has refused to fill his treasury by taking the tax upon opium, so this State and country should refuse to sully the vaults of our money department by casting into them the proceeds of a tax upon spirituous liquors. Mr. FIELDS moved that the petition be referred to the Kings County delegation, that body having voted for harmonious action upon the question involved in it.

LIFE INSURANCE.

The life insurance companies have become so rich during the past few years that a new legislation that looks to cutting off any of the enormous rights that they possess, calls out a vicious and angry opposition. To reach a growing evil, in view of the reckless risks taken by agents, a bill was presented by Mr. FLAGG providing that:

SEC. 1. In any action brought, or which may hereafter be brought upon any policy of life insurance issued by any company organized under the laws of this state, or any foreign corporation of like character doing business within this state, wherein the amount of payment shall have been made by the insured company to the agent, it shall not be permitted to impose as a defense in said action that such policy was obtained by fraud or misrepresentation on the part of the assured; and on the trial of said action such company or corporation shall be entitled to offer evidence of fraud or misrepresentation on the part of the assured; and it shall be deemed sufficient on the trial of said action that such company or corporation pleaded in the answer in said action, notwithstanding such fraud or misrepresentation, and waived all such fraud or misrepresentation in its original application.

The bill was ably fought by Mr. SCHERMERHORN, and the sense of the House was strongly against him, and, in the debate, the life insurance companies of Albany were characterized as being an example upon the civilization of the century. The vote of 77 yeas to 13 nays indicates how much hope there is for insurance companies to retain their present prerogatives.

REUNION IN MISSOURI.

Address of the St. Louis Republican Committee to the Republicans of the County.

The following address to the Republicans of St. Louis County, Missouri, has been published by their reorganized Committee:

HEAD-QUARTERS REPUBLICAN COUNTY COMMITTEE,
ST. LOUIS, March 4, 1871.

Fellow-Republicans of St. Louis County:

The accomplishment of the Republican reunion will be hailed with satisfaction and pleasure by Republicans of all shades of opinion, not only throughout this county and State, but throughout the length and breadth of the land. Every one of the Republican papers will welcome a harmonious front and cast look for rest to successful future. As the Republican County Committee of St. Louis County, it is highly gratifying to us to announce the completion of work that we regarded as the most serious obstacle to the reunion of our forces, and that we can once more unfurl our banner, and that we can once more be invincible.

The recent division grew out of a diversity of views as to the policy of the Independent Movement, and the individuality that has ever been characteristic of members of the Republican Party, and that make it the party of freedom—characteristics that, in our estimation, as well as in the estimation of the whole Republican party, is their safety and success. We therefore believe to be essential, illustrates the progressive spirit that animates this great party, and renders it a party of the people.

The Republican party has done for the nation through a war for national existence, and stands for the nation in the settlement necessary to maintain in peace what has only been won by its supremacy in the councils of the country. A party cannot demand of its people that the opposing party will challenge and assail that settlement. The Reconstruction amendments devolve upon Congress and the President the duty and responsibility of their execution. To this task be assigned to the Democrats! Much as the Republican Party has done, its mission is not yet ended.

A party of principles must prevail, involving the life of the nation, cannot obviate its ranks in the presence of a foe that still denies those principles and thereby threatens that life. A party magnanimous in spirit as the Republicans have shown themselves to be toward the former rebels, should not be slow to afford generously to forget its dissensions and cordially harmonize.

In the history of a great progressive party there are times when many of the members, honestly and conscientiously adhered to create a division that may subsequently retard the advance of the party to a beneficial result. But if the essential work of that party is not completed the division must be temporary. Every patriot and lover of his country is needed to call its ranks close up and present a solid phalanx to the recently elated, but now dismayed, enemy.

As this junction of Democratic threatens the destruction to the work of reconstruction—a work which has cost so much national labor and perseverance; at this time when the baleful Democracy stood in already waiting along the political horizon, ready to take advantage of the national ills, every Republican will lose any indifference he may have felt, will speak to animate all lovers of the reclaimed country to rally around the Report of Arms—Germany Indifferent to the British Odds of Mediation—Marine Disasters—Quebec Fortifications—The Conference—The American and Russian Loans—The Eastern Conference.

LONDON, March 10.—In the House of Commons, today, Mr. GLADSTONE stated that the Government had no intention of proposing any legislation to prohibit the exportation of arms. In reply to a question, Viscount ENFIELD, Under Foreign Secretary, admitted that England's offer of mediation between Germany and France was sent to Count BISMARCK through the Prussian Ambassador at London a fortnight ago, and that it still remained unanswered. Mr. HUGESSON, Under-Colonial Secretary, explained, that of the £9,000 appropriated for the defense of Quebec, all was to be applied to the erection of works south of the River St. Lawrence, none to the fortifications on the north bank.

The brig Ida Cutler, of and from St. John, N. B., for Matanzas, has been abandoned at sea. The crew was saved and brought to Queenstown.

The bark Lady Clermont, of Liverpool, has also been abandoned at sea. The crew was saved and brought to Queenstown.

A protest is circulating for signature in the London Stock Exchange, against the introduction of the Russian loan into the market pending the decision of the Black Sea Conference. The London firms, authorized by the United States Treasury Department, have invited applications to the new American loan.

Contrary to expectation the Conference did not sit today. When the next session will be held is not known.

UNITED GERMANY.

Official Announcement of Revival of the Empire Made to the United States.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—Baron GEROLT, Prussian Minister at Washington, visited the President this morning, whom he addressed as follows:

MR. PRESIDENT: I feel most happy to be the bearer of a letter from my most gracious Sovereign to your Excellency, conveying the notification that at the unanimous request of the sovereigns of the German States and of the free cities of Germany, to assume the ancient title of Emperor. After the German Empire had been re-established by the union of the German States under one Constitution, my august Sovereign has considered it as a duty to the common Fatherland to accept thankfully this dignity conferred by the confidence of his German confederates upon His Majesty and his successors upon the throne of Prussia. In having the honor to present His Majesty's letter to your Excellency, it needs no new assurance from me that the Emperor and United Germany desire to maintain, as heretofore, their friendly relations with the Government and the people of the United States, for whose happiness and welfare they have always entertained the most sincere wishes.

The President replied:

MAJOR GENERAL: The notification which you have conveyed to me relates to an event of great historical importance. The States of this Union, which universally bear a relation to the others similar to that which Prussia bears to the other States of Germany, have recently made such sacrifices and efforts toward maintaining the integrity of their common country for general purposes in peace and war, that they cannot fail to sympathize in similar proceedings for a like object elsewhere. The new title which has been accepted by your Sovereign may be regarded as the symbol, and the fulfillment on its part by Germany, of that high purpose. The disposition which you express on behalf of the Emperor of United Germany to maintain unimpaired and friendly relations with the Government and people of the United States, is heartily reciprocated.

WEST INDIES.

Unsuccessful Revolutionary Movements in Hayti—Promising Crop Reports.

JACMEL, Feb. 9.—Several small revolutionary movements have taken place, but were instantaneously quelled by the Government. On the night of the 2d and 3d inst. a small band of revolutionists attempted to surprise the arsenal, in the City of Port-au-Prince, but were foiled in the attempt. The leaders have been arrested and will be shot. These movements are caused by the last remnants of SALNAVE's party, but the popularity of the Government is too great to be effected by these riots. Peace has since been completely re-established.

ST. THOMAS, Feb. 10.—The French brig Palestro, from New-York, bound to Seville, Spain, loaded with kerosene, has arrived here in distress. Her cargo is being discharged. Consignees, NUNEZ FILS & Co. There is nothing otherwise to report from this island. The crop in Porto Rico is very large. The shipments of new sugar will commence at the end of February. The American Darien Expedition—Naval News—An Indian Fight.

ASPINWALL CITY, March 7, via KINGSTON, Ga., March 10.—Commander BARCLAY and Paymaster MCMAHON, of the United States steamer Resaca, have arrived here from Panama. They report that Commander SELFRIDGE, of the Darien expedition, with four officers, fourteen men and ten laborers left Paya on the 15th ult. in a steam launch, expecting to be gone one week. Others of the expedition were prosecuting the survey of the course of the Tuyara River, and would continue until they met the party from the Atlantic coast. The United States men-of-war Ossipee and Jamestown are expected to arrive at Panama within a few weeks. News now comes by way of Bolivia from Uruguay that the rebel General, LOPEZ JORDAN, has been defeated and fled into Entre-Rios. Advices from Chili to the 10th report a fight between the troops and 300 Indians, in which the latter were defeated.

Continued Opposition to the Government—Business Prospects Improving.

LAGUAYRA, Feb. 9.—Nothing new to report. There is still some opposition shown to the Government in the eastern departments near Barcelona. Gen. PULIDO, at the head of the Government forces, is successfully operating against Gen. CHINGO OLIVO, who commands this last remnant of the opposition. Business in general bears a more healthy aspect. The fleet continues anchored at Puerto Cabello, and it is rumored that all the vessels are to be sold, and perhaps may be purchased by the "Cuban cause."

The Argentine Rebels—Movements of Jordan—Loss of the Steam-Ship Horace—Trade—Cotton Culture—News from the Interior.

From An Occasional Correspondent.

BUENOS AYRES, Sunday, Jan. 15, 1871.

At last the desolating war which has for so long a time afflicted Montevideo is being brought to a close. On Christmas morning the Blancos, (rebels,) about five thousand strong, had a battle with the Government troops, under Gen. SUAREZ, in which they were defeated, after having fought hard for four and a half hours. All the rebels, except about six hundred, were either killed or taken prisoners. APARICIO, the rebel chief, escaped, but is likely soon to fall into the hands of offended justice, which is after him in the shape of Gen. SUAREZ, to whom all the honor of this victory is due. GEN. SUAREZ, unlike his predecessor, CABABALLO, is immensely rich, and, consequently, cannot be bought. He is also a firm Colorado, or Government man, and it is confidently expected that he will soon put an end to this war. Montevideo is beginning to look better than it has done for many a day, and a long and prosperous peace is hoped for and expected by all parties.

MOVEMENTS OF JORDAN.

LOPEZ JORDAN, the Entre Rios celebrity, after having been chased all over the country, made his appearance in Rosario Santa Fé, where he thought, by a stirring proclamation, (in which he appealed to the people's patriotism, and exhorted them to rally round his rebel flag, and sacrifice themselves for him and the country,) to seduce the Santa Fécians from their allegiance to the Government. That little plan, however, did not succeed, and he was obliged to retire to the islands of the Parana, and afterward to Entre Rios, whence he was again obliged to retire, and he is expected to invade Corrientes, where, in all probability, his career will come to an inglorious termination, as the people of Corrientes are all armed, and waiting for him, and Gen. ARREDONDO, (the new Commander-in-Chief of the National forces,) is in hot pursuit. So it is probable that Mr. LOPEZ will soon be remembered as a thing that was, but is no more. President SARMIENTO has addressed the people of Santa Fé, in a proclamation, in which he compliments them on their valor and patriotism, and exhorts them always to stand by the Government.

SHIPWRECK.

Great excitement has been caused here by the loss of the British steam-ship Bornéo, Capt. COLE. The following is the account of her wreck given by Mr. WHITE, the engineer: The Bornéo left Montevideo on the night of Dec. 22. There was a strong head wind and a heavy sea. She struck the ground eight miles from Cape St. Marta, one mile from shore, at 1 o'clock on the morning of the 25th, while it was dark and raining. The ship struck heavily and kept rolling. After backing the engines for an hour, they stopped to wait for daylight. At about 2 A. M. the mammast went over, taking the steam winch and part of the deck. At 4 A. M. launched the first boat, under charge of Mr. ROWANT, second officer, with twenty-two men, (of whom about half were lost in landing,) with orders to keep out to sea. The next boat, with third officer and twenty-two men, met the same fate. And the life-boat, with chief officer, in trying to get alongside the ladder to take in the passengers, broke adrift and could not fetch the ship again; of the six men in her two were lost. A very strong raft was then made, about thirty feet long, with a dingy fastened in the middle, in which the two ladies, two children and mails were put; also two male passengers, four engineers, Mr. BUTCHER, the Captain and about twenty-five men, including two stewards, the carpenter and the baker. Capt. COLE was the last to leave the ship. On leaving, a heavy sea came and upset the raft, throwing everybody into the water. Of all aboard the raft, forty of the crew and one lady passenger were saved. The shore could be distinctly seen when the raft left, and every one in it thought all was right. The doctor swam the whole way ashore. The mails were saved, having been tied to the raft. The letters were dried on the shore and sent to Rio. From £4,000 to £5,000, about $30,000 in gold, was lost.

TRADE.

Sheep farming in Buenos Ayres is beginning to look a little better, and it is high time that it should, as sheep farmers have hardly been paying expenses. About 25,000 sheep were sold by auction last week at prices varying from $15, currency, (30 cents each,) to $30, currency, equal to $1 40 in gold.....Business in the wool market is also improving. About 50 cart-loads were sold last week at prices varying from $44, currency, to $55, currency; say $1 90 to $2 20 per arroba of 25 pounds. The best wools are in great demand. The highest price which has been paid this year for wool is $55, currency, or $2 60, gold, per arroba. The stock in deposit is said to be nearly half a million arrobas.

COTTON CULTURE.

Mr. WHITTAKER has just arrived at Salta, from England, bringing with him a complete set of machinery to the value of about $10,000, in gold, for the cotton mill on the Rio de las Piedras, in this province, where he intends to spin and weave both wool and cotton. This will be a new source of wealth to these countries, and we venture to say that this, and similar enterprises, will do more to abolish the everlasting party struggles than all the armies in the Republic.

THE INTERIOR.

Peace and order reign supreme in the provinces of the interior, emigration increases almost daily, and things in general are looking brighter and better than they had for a long time. It is an acknowledged fact that Buenos Ayres has progressed more during the last five years than it did before in twenty. Tramways, railroads, telegraphs, water and gas works, exhibitions, &c., &c., are having their influence for good on the people, and the spirit of the age is not nearly so warlike as it formerly was. After the termination of the Entre Rios war we all expect to see an era of peace and prosperity in these countries, and the appointment of the new Commander-in-Chief of the National Army in Entre Rios is as good as a surety that this long-wished-for era of happiness is not far distant. ALCHUTE.

THE PACIFIC ISLANDS.

Mails to Australia from Honolulu—Fiji Islanders—Opposition to Any Organized Government.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 7.—The bark Murray, sixteen days from Honolulu, at this port, brings news that the Hawaiian Government has made a contract with Hall's line, already established, to carry the mails to and from Australia. A vessel from Fiji reports that matters there are in a very unsettled condition. The King offered the inhabitants of Livuke City a charter, but the citizens were so jealous of the establishment of a Police force, that the meeting called to adopt the charter broke up in a row, and now this town, on one of the largest islands of the group, is without regulations whatsoever, save the will of the chiefs.

FIRES.

Extensive Conflagration in the Oil Regions—Losses in Other Localities.

PITTSBURG, Penn., March 10.—At an early hour this morning a fire originated in the Buffalo House at Petroleum Centre, Penn., which place is composed almost entirely of wooden buildings. The fire spread across the street and on both sides as far south as Aiken's Hall, and north to the bank of the creek, leaving the American House standing. Fifty-eight buildings, dwellings and stores, besides barns, &c., were destroyed, the fire sweeping five acres clear. Among the heaviest losers are JAMES RUTHERFORD, hardware, entire stock and building, $8,000; the Petroleum House, furniture and building, $10,000; H. C. WACHTER, grocer, stock partly saved, $3,500; OWEN GAFFNEY, liquors, $16,000. The entire loss is estimated at $150,000.

RICHMOND, Va., March 10.—A special dispatch from Orange Court-house, Va., says a fire at that place yesterday afternoon destroyed the hotel of HOUSEWORTH & YATES, the Baptist church, the store of Mr. RUSS, and three dwelling houses.

BOSTON, March 10.—CHARLES SPAULDING'S steam saw and grist-mill at Rumney, N. H., was burned this morning; loss, $5,000. The barn of LEONARD ELMS, at Lisbon, N. Y., with thirty head cattle and twenty tons hay, was burned last night. No insurance.

CINCINNATI, March 10.—Afire broke out in PICKLE'S saloon, in Union-street, Richmond, Ky., on Thursday morning, and consumed nearly the whole square. The Webster House, the Central Hotel, and many stores and residences were destroyed. It is feared that one man at the Central Hotel lost his life. He has not been seen since the fire. The entire loss is estimated at $150,000.

Probable Volcanic Eruption on the Pacific Coast.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 9.—Mount Rainier, in Washington Territory, appears to be firing up for a volcanic eruption. The heat at the summit has become so great as to melt the snow. Heretofore during the hottest Summer weather the melting of the snow was but partial. There is a constant emission of steam, and some persons living in the vicinity report smoke from the mountain....Conductor G. S. WOOD, of the Central Pacific Railroad, sued the Brooklyn Independent, (newspaper,) for slander, in having published that he seduced a young girl, and recovered $100 damages. The evidence exonerated him from the charge.

Immense Destruction of Property in Missouri by the Recent Tornado.

ST. LOUIS, March 10.—The losses in East St. Louis by the tornado of Wednesday were much exaggerated. A more careful estimate places them at about the following figures: Elevator, $15,000; Ferry Company, $10,000; St. Louis and Vandalia Railroad, between $20,000 and $40,000; South-eastern Road, $15,000; Chicago and Alton Railroad, $50,000; Ohio and Mississippi Railroad, $30,000; Toledo and Wabash Railroad, between $75,000 and $100,000; the steamer Mollie Able much more seriously injured than first reported, being almost stripped of her upper works, will require repairs to the amount of $20,000. The losses to citizens cannot be accurately given, but as some sixty dwelling-houses, of more or less value, were either destroyed or damaged, the loss can hardly fall short of $100,000. The railroad companies are busy repairing damages, and citizens are busy endeavoring to gather up the remains of their houses and collecting together their furniture. Reports from the country are coming in. In some localities the damage is considerable. In Morgan County, Ill. houses, fences and forests were blown away, and several persons badly injured. At Helena, Arkansas, the same afternoon, a hurricane passed over the city, unroofing a number of houses and doing other damage to property.

Caucus of the Members of the House Last Night on Southern Outrages—Blair's Status.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The adjourned caucus of the Republican members of the House, to consider the best method of protecting Southern Unionists, assembled to-night. About one-half of the Republicans of the House were present.

Mr. AMBLER, of Ohio, raised the point whether Mr. BLAIR, of Missouri, should participate in the deliberations of the caucus, stating that it was understood that Mr. BLAIR stated last night that he would not be bound by the action of the caucus.

Mr. MORRY stated that the voluntary presence of Mr. BLAIR was and should be deemed sufficient guarantee that he had intended to act with the Republican Party on all party issues.

Judge KELLEY followed, taking an opposite view of the matter, and stated that Mr. BLAIR had voted for MORGAN and not for BLAINE.

Mr. BLAIR explained his position, stating that while his pledges as an anti-protectionist made to his constituents prevented his voting for BLAINE, who was a protectionist, he was a liberal Republican, and had intended to be a straight out national Republican.

Mr. BUTLER presented the report of the Committee appointed last night. The first item was a proposition to amend the rules, to prevent so much filibustering on the part of the minority. The Committee recommend that a subcommittee be appointed to confer with the Senate caucus at 11 o'clock A. M. on Saturday, in relation to the proper legislation that should be had on the subject of the enforcement of law and order in the South.

Mr. SHERIDON was not in favor of legislation that would not apply to criminals in any part of the country.

Mr. ELLIOTT, of South Carolina, (colored,) made a strong appeal to the Republicans, not to consent to an adjournment till a bill was passed to punish the Kuklux, and to protect the citizens of the South.

A committee of five members was appointed, to consult with the Senate caucus, and report action to an adjourned caucus, to be called by the Chairman.

Miscellaneous Telegrams.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 10.—Three or four witnesses for the defense testified, in the Filkins case that HALPINS, on the night of the robbery, described the robber as a man with black moustache and chin whiskers. FILKINS at that time wore a moustache and full whiskers, brown in color. In the rebutting evidence for the prosecution JEREMIAH FLOOD, a hackman, swore that on the night of the robbery FILKINS rode upon a car with him from the rear of the Delavan House to the Union Depot. The case will probably be closed to-morrow.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 10.—The Illinois River is higher than has been known for several years. All low lands below Peoria are submerged. Many warehouses are surrounded by water, and business has to be done from the second story. There are no accounts of material damage, however.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, March 10.—This morning the boiler of a portable saw-mill exploded about a mile east of the village. The force of the explosion was terrific. J. BEERS was instantly killed, and his brother BENJAMIN fatally, and their father mortally wounded. Low water in the boiler was the cause of the explosion.

PHILADELPHIA, March 10.—A large and enthusiastic Republican meeting was held to night in Camden, N. J., when resolutions were passed condemning the removal of Senator SUMNER from his position as Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations as a blow aimed at the existence of the Republican Party, and entreating President GRANT to stay the hands of his injudicious friends.

The citizens of Mount Vernon have decided to celebrate the close of the war between France and Germany by a peace jubilee, to be held on Easter Monday. At a meeting held on Thursday evening B. HUMMEL was chosen President, Col. J. G. FAY, Major DIECKMAN and Capt. H. HUSS, Marshals for the occasion. The Third Regiment, N. G. S. N. Y., and several associations are expected to turn out on the occasion. One of the features of the procession will be a vehicle beautifully decorated with the emblems of peace. Addresses are to be delivered. There will be a display of fireworks, and the jubilee is to wind up with a grand hop.

Angel; Assessors, George Hance and Bernard Shave; for School Trustees, Dr. King, Thomas W. Timpson and Gustavus Piffer.

The "China."

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

MAY I beg the favor of notifying the public, through the columns of your paper, that the European steamer, China, has sickness on board, and is detained in the Lower Bay by the Health Officers? No passengers, no baggage, nor any of my newspaper or magazine parcels have been allowed to come up as yet, nor is it likely that the steamer will arrive at the pier in the river before mid-day.

Yours respectfully,
AUGUST BRENTANO.

The [illegible] which have of late been a prominent feature in many Sunday papers, are entirely excluded from the Sunday edition of the TIMES. All objectionable features are avoided, and the paper is carefully adapted for reading in the family circle. The following are some of the opinions of the Press:

"The Sunday edition of the NEW-YORK TIMES has the best selected miscellany of any Sunday paper in the country. Its news department also is admirable."—Cincinnati (Ohio) State Journal.

"It needs only to have a subscription on Sunday, it is better that they should save a good one than a bad one. The Sunday edition has improved very much for its purity, but the tone of its morals has been greatly improved since the TIMES commenced issuing a Sunday edition. The TIMES has all the advantages which belong to a daily paper in obtaining the latest news, and its Sunday edition has a large amount of extraordinary of general intelligence, and most admirable literary selections, which form suitable and entertaining reading for Sundays, as well as all other days."—Brooklyn Union.

"Attention is called to the advertisement of the Sunday edition of the NEW-YORK TIMES, in another column. Its literary selections are always in good taste, and nothing is admitted in its columns that any one need fear to take into the family circle."—Newark Courier.

"Those who have read the Sunday issues of the TIMES need not to be reminded of the fact that they are richly worth buying. They are free from the sensational and otherwise objectionable features that are too common in Sunday papers, and they contain a most judicious and pleasing selection of the best things in current periodical literature, excellent stories, able discussions of social, moral and religious questions, and fresh and lively pictures of most interesting phases of life in the Metropolis. The paper is a model of good arrangement and good taste, and presents nothing that should be kept out from the family circle while it has something to please all healthy readers."—The Evening Mail.

"The Sunday edition of the NEW-YORK TIMES has become one of the best papers published in the City."—The Commercial Advertiser.

"We have often received an inquiry from our readers, 'When will you commence publishing a Sunday Standard?' Let us answer them in the Yankee fashion. What is the necessity? At present, those who have already within our reach on every Sabbath morning the pure, unsullied pages of the NEW-YORK TIMES. Let our readers look at the variety of contents promised for to-morrow's edition, and appreciate the vacuum caused by the one day's rest of the Standard. If they are equal to the task, as an advertising medium we would recommend it the same as we do our Saturday edition. The children call the attention of their mothers to the advertisement, and the purse of the father opens most readily at the beginning of the week."—Standard.

A POLICE MURDER.

The Truth at Last in the Case of James Murphy.

Coroner's Inquest—Declaration by the Jury that the Deceased Was Killed by Officer Toomey —The Accused Held for Trial.

Coroner KEENAN proceeded, yesterday, with his investigation in the case of JAMES MURPHY, whose mysterious death on Sunday last, in the Fourth Ward, led to so much speculation. The truth was elicited yesterday, however, by the evidence of the three officers who assisted Patrolman PATRICK TOOMEY to remove the deceased to the station-house. The following is the evidence presented yesterday:

Officer PATRICK BRODERICK, of the Seventh Precinct, testified that about two o'clock on Sunday morning he saw MURPHY and two companions in Cherry-street near Henry; and as they were singing, he told them to stop, as it was an unseasonable hour, and people wished to sleep; one of the party replied in a pleasant way, "All right," and they passed on; he saw no more of the officers or MURPHY after that; he went to the Fourth Ward side, when he saw the officer had some words, the officer telling deceased to go home; as the witness turned the corner at Henry and Catharine-streets he heard the cry of "murder" and "watch;" two Sixth Ward officers and the witness came up to section in Catharine-street; witness found officer TOOMEY in what was the middle, as there was a crowd; TOOMEY stated that MURPHY, who was lying on the pavement, kicking and struggling, had been disorderly and abusive, and he would help to clear them up; the station-house witness took hold of MURPHY'S right leg, Officer HUGHES of the left leg, Officer BROWN of the left arm and Officer TOOMEY of the right, and then they carried him down Catharine-street toward Henry-street; MURPHY struggled violently and kicked; I don't see how he came to be quiet, and struck MURPHY two or three times with his club on the body, between the breast and the stomach; the blows were so heavy that the deceased's head kicked forward, and that he struck again; witness remarked that there was no necessity to strike MURPHY, as there was plenty of help to take him to the station-house; after that, the four officers carried MURPHY down to the corner of Madison and Catharine-streets and laid him down on the sidewalk; a friend of the deceased came up there with MURPHY'S hat, which TOOMEY picked up and handed to him; when they were four officers; witness felt his pulse in the station-house and found it slow.

Sergt. JOSEPH E. KELLY, of the Fourth Ward Police Station-house, testified that he was at the station-house at half past two o'clock A. M. on the 5th inst. by Officers TOOMEY, BROWN, HUGHES, BRODRICK, and two others who had joined them near the deceased; witness asked what the prisoners were for when TOOMEY replied that MURPHY had been acting in a disorderly manner; TOOMEY said that MURPHY and some others had been disorderly, and were driven off by a Seventh Ward officer; he had to drive two more off; witness told TOOMEY that he must go home, and he had pushed him with his club; some citizens came in, and stated that MURPHY had been clubbed to death, as I guessed from the statements, which I took the names of all the officers; no mention was made by any of the officers of TOOMEY having clubbed the deceased; MURPHY was either dead or dying when brought to the station-house.

Dr. WOOSTER BEACH testified that he had made the post-mortem examination on the body of MURPHY, but found no marks of external violence; he stated, however, that from the evidence elicited he was of the opinion that death had been caused by the effects produced by Officer TOOMEY, as a heavy blow in the region of the stomach frequently produces death, and leaves no mark of external violence.

Coroner KEENAN then closed the case, and informed the jury that they must be governed wholly by the medical evidence in determining the cause of death. The deceased had evidently been struck by Officer TOOMEY, and so sustained fatal injuries. The accused had endeavored to be too smart in the discharge of his duty, for two other officers had seen the deceased and his friends on the same night, and had nearly stopped their noise and ordered them to go home, while they had not struck them; the encounter between MURPHY and TOOMEY occurred. The Coroner was of the opinion that a man who could so far forget himself as to strike a defenseless man in the way he did was not fit to be a member of the Police Department. Under the circumstances, the jury must find a verdict against TOOMEY.

The jurors after consultation, acquiesced in this view of the case, and the Coroner fully committed TOOMEY for trial. When asked what he he had to say in answer to the charge, the prisoner said that the other officers had sworn falsely in some respects, and that he was not guilty. Capt. ALEXANDER SHELL took TOOMEY in charge of office, and ROBERT KELLY escorted him to the Tombs as soon as the crowd had dispersed.

THE HOGAN WILL CASE.

A Verdict for Mrs. Hatch, the Plaintiff—The Property to be Equally Distributed.

The case of SARAH C. HATCH against CLARA M. PEUGNET, which for the past ten days had been on trial in Part I. of the Supreme Court, before Judge SUTHERLAND, and reports of which have appeared from day to day in the TIMES, was concluded yesterday by a verdict in favor of the plaintiff, Mrs. HATCH. Judge SUTHERLAND delivered a long and exhaustive charge to the jury, who, after an absence of about twenty minutes, returned answers to the several issues submitted to them, as follows:

To the question whether Mrs. HOGAN executed an instrument purporting to be her will on the 6th of October, 1868, and which is the one referred to in the complaint, they answered "Yes," under direction of the Court.

To the question whether, at the time of making such will, Mrs. HOGAN was of sound and disposing mind, they answered "Yes" under direction of the Court.

To the question whether such will was procured by fraud and undue influence, they answered "No."

To the question whether Mrs. HOGAN did intimate, as to her real estate, without having made any valid device of the same, they answered "Yes."

To the question whether Mrs. HOGAN, at the time she made and executed the deed to SARAH C. HATCH, (the same deed which conveyed the property to Mrs. PEUGNET,) possessed a degree of will and memory, and understanding sufficient, with full knowledge of the nature and effects of the same, to make such deed a valid instrument, they answered "No."

To the question whether the deed was procured by fraud or undue influence of CLARA M. PEUGNET and EUGENE PEUGNET, her husband, or of any friend or confidant of either of them, or of any person or persons, and if so, whom? They answered: "Yes, Mrs. and Dr. PEUGNET."

To the question whether such deed was made by Mrs. HOGAN of her own free will, uninfluenced thereto unduly by CLARA M. PEUGNET and EUGENE PEUGNET, or by either one of them, they answered "No."

To the question, was the instrument last free, valid act and deed, they answered "No."

Mr. GRAHAM asked that the jury be polled, and each having stated that the answers to the questions as read by the Clerk were his individual answers to such questions, he made a formal motion to set aside the verdict as against the weight of evidence and the law as charged by the Court. It was not intended, he said, that the motion should be argued and decided then, but it was the practice under such circumstances so have the motion entered as made and argued at the time of rendering the verdict, though the argument took place subsequently. He would therefore ask that the term be extended and a day fixed to hear the argument.

Judge SUTHERLAND extended the term to the 28th instant, and fixed the 18th instant to hear the argument on the motion to set aside the verdict.

The jury were then discharged, and thus ended this important case, as almost all the impartial auditors seemed to think it should end, since the

A Question for Artists—What is a "Life Picture?"

The case of OREGON WILSON vs. JACOB A. SHERMAN was called on for trial in the Marine Court yesterday, before Judge GROSS. The defendant it appears having a little daughter who died, had her photograph taken after death, and from this photograph requested the plaintiff to paint a "life picture" in oil, on canvas. The picture was painted, presenting a likeness of the child asleep, with her eyes closed. This picture defendant refused to accept, because, as he said, it was not according to his idea, a "life picture." His idea of a "life picture" was one with the eyes open and smiling at somebody, and this not being such, though by his direction several touches were given to it, he refused to receive the picture. The plaintiff claims that the picture was painted in the most artistic style; that to paint from a picture of a dead person with the eyes open would produce an unnatural stare; and that the picture was what artists usually term a "life picture." The amount sued for is $200, and the case is still on. G. & W. PEMAN appear for the plaintiff, and A. H. NORRIS for the defendant.

THE LAWS OF THE TURF.

Meeting of the Board of Appeals at the Hoffman House—The Cases Decided and the Points Involved—Gathering of the Patrons of the Turf.

There was a goodly gathering of the patrons of the turf at the Hoffman House, on Thursday night, the occasion being a meeting of the Board of Appeals of the National Association. Capt. KENDRIS and DAN MACE were the two most conspicuous figures, and the latter drew quite a little crowd around him in the hallway by his earnestness in eulogizing the merits of some new fivers he has ready for the Spring campaign, while the veteran Captain would tell stories about Aberdeen by the hour.

BOERT was also around, looking quite fresh after his Winter's rest, and BENDIX claimed to have some new horses that can show a wonderful turn of speed. The Board of Appeals were in session nearly all night, and decided some very important cases. The assembly present were Gov. HOFFMAN, President of the Association; Geo. C. Hall, of New-York; Col. H. R. Russell, of Boston; C. W. Wooley, of Ohio; Gates H. Barnard, of Troy, and T. J. Vail, of Hartford.

The first case which came before the Board was the appeal of WM. H. SAUNDERS from the ruling of the Orange County Pleasure Ground Association in relation to the non-payment of entrance money claimed to be due him by such Association. The entry was made by telegraph on the day the entries closed, and was not received until the next. The Board decided that in case of entry by telegraph the communication must be received at or before the hour fixed for the closing of the entries.

The case of L. C. HYERSON was next in order. HYERSON made application to have his horse Brown Prince, since named Vee-Queen, Jon., reinstated, assigning as a reason that he was not posted in regard to the rules when he entered him in a purse offered by the New-Haven Driving Park Association. The Board decided that under article 4 of the rules they must hold to a rigid application of the penalty, under which any horse that shall have been entered for a purse fraudulently, shall be expelled from all courses represented in the Association.

The case of the driver, J. H. MAHEW, who was expelled by order of the Fleetwood Park Association, in December last, for foul driving, came up on an application made to the Board for review of the decision expelling him. The Board continued the case, ordering a notice to be given the Fleetwood Association.

The Board then re-elected Mr. GEO. H. SMITH, of Providence, Secretary and Treasurer of the National Association.

WILLIAM BOERT, the well-known driver, then submitted an appeal from the rulings of the Mystic Park Association, involving claim of entrance money in a case where a race was postponed, under the rules from Friday until the next Monday. BOERT claimed that Saturday being a good day for the race should then have come off. Monday was wet and the trot did not come off. The horse George Willies being entered in a purse at Narragansett Park on Tuesday, BOERT was compelled to abandon the race at Mystic Park. The Board decided that the entrance money made good BOERT must pay the entrance money, that he incurred this liability when he made the engagements so near together.

The case which was one which has already excited much comment. It was that of the horses Tenmore and Major, who trotted over the Union Course on the 25th of November, 1870, about which there has been some dispute, growing out of the conflicting claims and statements of parties interested. From evidence submitted to the Board, it was found that the match-makers had drawn and accepted their stakes, and the post-seller had returned the money invested in pools. The Board therefore considered the matter to be at an end, and declined to take it up; whether it could not say when death occurred; MURPHY was perfectly quiet after he was struck by TOOMEY; they were very busy there.

Officer JOHN E. BROWN, of the Sixth Precinct, was next examined, and corroborated HUGHES' evidence, stating that when he first saw MURPHY the deceased asked to be allowed to go home, and he felt because he was intoxicated, so they carried him; witness did not see any violence offered to MURPHY; there were four officers; witness felt his pulse in the station-house and found it slow.

Sergt. JOSEPH E. KELLY, of the Fourth Ward Police Station-house, testified that he was at the station-house at half past two o'clock A. M. on the 5th inst. by Officers TOOMEY, BROWN, HUGHES, BRODRICK, and two others who had joined them near the deceased; witness asked what the prisoners were for when TOOMEY replied that MURPHY had been acting in a disorderly manner; TOOMEY said that MURPHY and some others had been disorderly, and were driven off by a Seventh Ward officer; he had to drive two more off; witness told TOOMEY that he must go home, and he had pushed him with his club; some citizens came in, and stated that MURPHY had been clubbed to death, as I guessed from the statements, which I took the names of all the officers; no mention was made by any of the officers of TOOMEY having clubbed the deceased; MURPHY was either dead or dying when brought to the station-house.

DEFRAUDING THE GOVERNMENT

A Forfeiture of $400,000 Claimed—Suit Against Wenlsky Importers for Alleged Irregularities—Waiting for the Verdict.

The trial of the suit brought by the Government against the firm of WELD & Co., composed of WM. F. WELD, the senior partner, and RICHARD BAKER, Jr., and FREDERICK BAKER, extensive importers, for the recovery of about $400,000, for alleged violation of the Customs laws, terminated in the United States District Court, before Judge BLATCHFORD yesterday, after having lasted nearly four weeks. The case attracted a great deal of interest on account of the large amount and the questions of law which were involved. The defendants are the owners of ninety-six sailing vessels and light steamers, and own importing houses at Boston, Philadelphia, New-York and China. The suit was first commenced in January, 1870, being brought for the forfeiture of upward of 2,000,000 pounds of sugar alleged to have been fraudulently imported into this city in violation of section 1 of the act of March 3, 1863. The value of the sugar, as claimed by the Government, was $346,176, although the declaration claimed $406,000. The forfeiture was claimed in the declaration under two counts, distinct in form and subject matter, and alleged facts on which these counts were made are as follows: The sugar were imported from Manilla, and the invoice stated the weight as of the weight of —— pounds. The Manilla picul is equal to 133⅓ pounds. The full amount of the piculs was correctly stated in the entry paper made by the defendants, but the reduction into pounds was made at the rate of 133⅓, making a difference in the total of pounds between the full and 3-rds reduction of about 92,000.

The Government claimed, however, that it was the original step in the perpetration of a subsequent fraud the allegations of which were set forth in the second count as follows: "That the defendants bribed the United States Weighers to make a false return of the weight of the sugar."

After the summing up of counsel, and the delivery of the charge of the Court, yesterday, the jury were ordered by Judge BLATCHFORD to retire to their rooms and to bring in a sealed verdict this morning.

District-Attorney DAVIS and Assistant District-Attorneys SIMONS and SEDGWICK appeared for the Government, and Messrs. SIDNEY WEBSTER and JAMES CRAIG for the defendants.

Altering United States Bonds—Trial of George B. Chadwick.

In the United States District Court, yesterday, before Judge WOODRUFF, GEO. B. CHADWICK was tried on a charge of altering and passing a United States bond of the denomination of $10,000. It will be remembered that in July last CARLOS CASTILLIO Y. LOZAGO, Secretary of the Cuban Junta, was robbed of $65,000 in bonds, in his room in the St. George Hotel. A short time subsequently, Dr. EARLE, of No. 245 Harrison-street, Brooklyn, purchased a bond from the prisoner, but upon presenting that the Treasury Department it was ascertained to be altered, and one of those stolen from LOZAGO. A complaint was immediately entered against CHADWICK, but in the meantime the bond was returned to him, and he disposed of it. Officer THOMAS STAWSON, of the Treasury Department, gave evidence that he was sent to California to arrest VAN ESTEN, recently convicted of forgery, and discovered that the latter had passed this bond on a California bank for $9,683. These facts were all adduced in the evidence, and the case was summed up on behalf of the Government and of the prisoner. The Court adjourned without submitting the case to the jury.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

But few persons were in attendance at the Exchange yesterday, (March 10,) and the market was generally quiet. One sale, however, was effected during the day by MULLER, WILKINS & Co., by order of the Superior Court, under the direction of JOSEPH MEEKS, Esq., referee, as follows: A three-story and basement brown-stone house and lot located on the north side of Sixtieth-street, forty-feet east of Fourth-avenue, lot 20 by 100.6. Sold to ADDISON BROWN, the plaintiff in the action in question, for $29,200. The only other business transacted was an adjournment by JAMES M. MILLER of the legal sale of property, comprising a lot, with the buildings thereon, situated on the east side of Third-avenue, north of Forty-second-street, until March 16, and an announcement by WM. KENNELLY that the sale of a lot, with stable thereon, on the north side of Thirty-seventh-street, between Fifth and Sixth avenues, was postponed indefinitely, the foreclosure suit involving the public disposition of the premises, having been settled. For next week the sections projected are of a very important character, and for the information of dealers and others interested in real estate, a complete list of the sales to take place will be published in this column on Monday, to which attention is called. Attention is also directed to the lists at property offered at private sale, and of dwellings and stores to let, which will appear in the Sunday edition of the TIMES to-morrow, and which, as a matter of general information at this time, will prove extremely valuable.

Messrs. WILKINS, SANDS & GARRETSON, No. 31 Chamberstreet, report having recently sold at private sale the three-story and basement brown-stone house and lot, located on the north side of East Thirty-seventh-street, 150 feet east of Park-avenue, known as No. 111. The house has been built ten years. It is 21.6 by 45 feet in size, finished in hard wood and in good repair. The lot is 21.6 by 99.9. Mr. G. W. NASH is the purchaser of the property; and the price paid was $60,000.

WASHINGTON.

Senator knows as much about it as I do, and I think a little more.

Mr. SUMNER—And I know nothing. Nothing. [Renewed laughter.]

Mr. HOWE proceeded to review in detail the alleged personal disagreements between Mr. SUMNER and others, which had rendered a selection of a new Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations necessary. He denied the correctness of Mr. SUMNER's assertion that the San Domingo scheme was at the bottom of the whole matter, and maintained that the Senate's action had no significance further than he had stated.

Mr. STEWART, of Nevada, said the simple question was whether Senators might vote for Chairmen of Committees without having their motives impugned. Can they not vote for a Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations without having improper motives ascribed to them?

Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, thought the true reason for this action had not yet been given. The Senator from Wisconsin denied that the San Domingo matter has anything to do with it, but every body knew the fact, and it was useless to deny it, that this affair has grown out of the San Domingo matter. We all know that if this San Domingo annexation scheme had never come up, there never would have been any effort to change the composition of the Committee on Foreign Relations. He had always thought the San Domingo matter a very small affair, and regretted that it had ever been brought in to destroy the harmony of the Republican Party. He feared that it would be to that party what Lecompton was to the Democracy. He believed nineteen-twentieths of the men who voted the Republican ticket in 1868, were opposed to it. He did not believe there were a hundred men in Massachusetts, of any party, who would not indignantly condemn this outrage in striking down an eminent statesman of twenty-five years' standing, on a question as to whether he replied to an inquiry put to him by the Secretary of State. Great God! was such a farce ever before played before the American people?

Mr. NYE, of Nevada, regretted having had anything to do with this matter, and wished the appointment of the Committees had been vested in the Vice-President. He denied that any Senator had been struck down. All that had been done was to change the chairman of a committee, so as to bring an important committee into harmonious relations with the Executive. There was nothing in this to rank the nation or to break up the Republican Party.

Mr. LOGAN, of Illinois, said he did not expect that anything he could say would change the result, as that was a foregone conclusion. He did not believe the change had been made merely because the time had arrived for reforming the Committees. Making the chairmanship of a committee be changed every time the Chairman happens to be personally distasteful to the Executive or to a member of his Cabinet? This was not in accordance with the independence of the legislative branch of the Government. The speech of the Senator from Massachusetts claims from which the seat of secrecy was removed, was accepted by the whole country as the text upon which those claims were to be settled, and now, when the High Commission is here, we were to say to those gentlemen, "We have deposed this gentleman from the head of the Committee on Foreign Relations." [Laughter.]

At 4 P. M., Mr. TIPTON moved to adjourn.

Not agreed to—yeas 26, nays 28.

Mr. TIPTON, of Nebraska, then addressed the Senate. He said he knew sometime ago the intention to array the President against the Senator who led off against the San Domingo indignity. When the Senator from Connecticut (FERRY) had made a motion to investigate the appointment of DAVID HAMM, it was charged that he was attacking the Administration.

Mr. TIPTON, of Nebraska, then said he had taken down in yesterday's proceedings in the Republican caucus, the words which fell from the lips of the Senator from Wisconsin (Mr. HOWE) as to the reason for this change. The words were "that the majority of the Senate were in favor of the annexation of San Domingo, and a majority of the Committee on Foreign Relations were opposed to it, and that was the reason for making the change."

Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio, asked if Mr. TIPTON did not feel some compunctions of conscience in divulging the secrets of a party caucus.

Mr. TIPTON said he might have, had he not seen the same statement in the columns of the morning papers, with the yeas and nays, and his friend's (SHERMAN's) name among them.

Mr. SHERMAN remarked perhaps his friend TIPTON had revealed the proceedings.

Mr. TIPTON replied that the Senator did not ask that question in good faith; that the Senator had too much respect for (Mr. TIPTON's) integrity and honor to intimate that he would do anything of that kind.

Mr. HOWE, of Wisconsin, then repeated what he did say in caucus. It was substantially that there was one parliamentary reason why, in his judgment, the right to alter the Committee on Foreign Relations should be exercised, and that was that he understood a majority of the Senate to be in favor of the annexation of San Domingo, and a majority of the Committee to be opposed to it. It was in accordance with parliamentary usage to remove the Chairman of a Committee. But that was not in itself the reason for removing the head of the Committee, because the adverse majority might very well be corrected by removing any other member of the Committee; and if that had been the only difficulty with the Committee on Foreign Relations, it might be waived hereafter as it had been heretofore.

Mr. EDMUNDS, of Vermont, said he did not see that there was any material difference in this statement from what he had said. He did not acknowledge that a majority of the Senate was in favor of San Domingo annexation. The vote stood 28 to 28, as stated in the newspapers, and that he knew to be true. [Laughter.]

Mr. EDMUNDS, of Vermont, rose to a question of order, and said that although it might be lawful for the Senator to betray private confidence, he submitted that it was clearly out of order for him to divulge the proceedings of the Executive Session.

The Chair (Mr. POMEROY) said the Senator was certainly out of order.

Mr. TIPTON then said, he would say that the Senator from Nebraska (meaning himself) had seen no reason to question the correctness of this statement made in the papers. He concluded his remarks with the assertion that he protested against this movement, in behalf of his constituency and of the Republicans of the country.

Mr. TRUMBULL, of Illinois, said that sixteen years ago he came into the Senate. It was a personal body, and its officers were seldom changed. Not more than three or four different CLERKS had sat at that desk since the first meeting of the Senate. In all the time he had been here until now a Chairman of a Committee had never been changed by his political friends, except at his own request. This was the first time it had been done. It was a removal, and nothing else could be made of it. Has it come to this that the composition of the Committees of this body is to be determined by the personal relations of a Senator with any one under heaven. He (Mr. TRUMBULL) had differed with the Senator from Massachusetts at times, and was sorry to say sometimes bitterly, but he had and always would, insist upon justice being done to that Senator. He stood by the Senator when he was struck down by the advocates of slavery, and he stood by him to-day, when the blows came from those who have been put into power as much through the instrumentality of the Senator from Massachusetts as any other men living. [Applause in the galleries.]

Mr. SHERMAN regretted that this discussion had taken place on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. CRAGIN, of New-Hampshire, was entirely opposed to the change.

Mr. MORTON, of Indiana, regretted that this matter had been brought into the Senate, when it should have been settled privately. He deemed as untrue the statement that San Domingo had anything to do with it. The question was never whether the Republicans of this body intended to shade by the action of a convention of their own party, into which they had entered.

Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, said he was an independent man, and he was not to be bound by a party caucus when its action was not right.

The motion of Mr. WILSON to postpone the further consideration of the subject until to-morrow was then rejected, as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Bayard, Buckingham, Casserly, Corbett, Davis of Kentucky, Davis of West Virginia, Kelly, Saulsbury, Schurz, Sprague, Stevenson, Stockton, Thurman, Tipton, Vickers, Wilson—16.

NAYS—Messrs. Akins, Boreman, Brownlow, Caldwell, Chandler, Cole, Conkling, Corbett, Cragin, Edmunds, Fenton, Ferry of Michigan, Flanagan, Frelinghuysen, Hamlin, Harlan, Hitchcock, Howe, Lewis, Morrill of Vermont, Morton, Nye, Osborn, Pomeroy, Pool, Ramsey, Robertson, Sawyer, Scott, Sherman, Stewart, West, Wright—28.

NAYS—Messrs. Blair, Casserly, Cooper, Davis of Kentucky, Davis of West Virginia, Kelly, Stevenson, Thurman, Vickers—9.

ABSENT ON NOT VOTING—Messrs. Bayard, Buckingham, Cameron, Carpenter, Cragin, Ferry of Connecticut, Gilbert, Hamilton, Hill, Kellogg, Logan, Pratt, Rice, Spalsbury, Schurz, Spencer, Sprague, Stockton, Sumner, Tipton, Trumbull, Wilson, Windom—23.

During the debate on the pension difficulty, the report of the Committee on Kuklux outrages was received and ordered to be printed.

After a short Executive Session, the Senate, at 7 o'clock, adjourned until Monday.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. DAWES, of Massachusetts, offered a resolution increasing the number of members of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds to nine, and including within its jurisdiction all the public buildings being constructed by the Government. Adopted.

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS.

Mr. STOUGHTON, of Michigan, introduced a bill to enable honorably discharged soldiers and sailors, their widows and orphan children, to acquire homesteads on the public lands. Referred.

Mr. CONGER, of Michigan, introduced a joint resolution construing the internal revenue act of July 14, 1870, so as to provide for the admission of animals specially imported for breeding purposes free of duty from the Dominion of Canada. Passed.

Mr. HILL, of New-Jersey, introduced bills to abolish the franking privilege and to repeal the income tax. Referred.

Mr. MORSE, of Louisiana, introduced bills to prescribe an oath of office; for the better organization of the District Courts of the United States in Louisiana; for the removal of political disabilities, and for the re-establishment of the Monroe land district of Louisiana. Referred.

THE MISSISSIPPI LEVEES.

Mr. MONEY offered a resolution for the appointment of a select committee of five on the subject of the construction and maintenance of a complete and effective system of levees on the Mississippi River, with authority to sit during the recess.

Mr. DAWES objected to the last clause of the resolution, when the resolution was modified so as to provide that there should be no expense incurred to the Government, and adopted.

RIVER BRIDGES.

Mr. FINKELNBURG, of Missouri, introduced bills to authorize and regulate the construction of bridges across the Mississippi, Missouri and Ohio Rivers, and to amend the act regulating the carriage of passengers by steam-ships. Referred.

ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. DAWES introduced a Deficiency bill, appropriating $141,855, and proceeded to explain how it became necessary.

The first item, to pay additional clerks in the Pension office, was necessitated by the bill granting pensions to the widows of officers. The next item was for a deficiency of $5,000 in the contingent fund of the House, which arose from the fact that since the last appropriation of $10,000, made about ten days ago, an additional sum of $10,000 had been put out under the resolutions of the House to contestants for seats, making the gross sum of $114,374 paid to persons whom the House had decided had no right to a dollar of it. The item of $8,000 for the Schedule case was the difference in belief and payment money on the amounts stipulated in the treaty. Another item was for the salary of an office created about two months ago, and not provided for in the General Appropriation bill.

Mr. TAFFE, of Nebraska, offered an amendment adding an item of $25,000 for the post-office building in Omaha, Neb. Adopted.

The bill was then passed.

THE SALT AND COAL DUTIES.

Mr. HALE, of Maine, moved to go into Committee of the Whole on the bill to repeal the duties on salt, and moved that all debate thereon, under the five-minute rule, cease in forty-five minutes.

Mr. COBB, of North Carolina, moved to adjourn. Negatived—ayes 86, noes 87.

After debate, the motion to limit discussion to forty-five minutes was agreed to by a vote of 98 to 83.

The motion to go into Committee was then agreed to—yeas 105, nays 74—and the House, at 2 o'clock, went into Committee of the Whole, Mr. DAWES in the chair, and resumed the consideration of the bill to repeal the duties on salt and coal.

Mr. BLAIR, of Michigan, offered an amendment reducing the duty on salt to 10 cents per 100 pounds, in bulk, and to 16 cents per 100 pounds, in sacks or bags. He said that his opposition to the bill was based upon his unwillingness to go into the question of the tariff in this matter.

Mr. COX, of New-York, submitted some statistics in reference to the anthracite trade. He referred to the business of one colliery in Lehigh County, Pennsylvania, which was organized in 1855, which increased its stock to $60,000 in 1870, which in 1861 paid fifteen per cent. profit and reserved a large surplus, which in 1862 paid eighty-five per cent. and reserved a larger surplus, which then watered its stock eight and one-third times, raising it to five hundred thousand dollars and paid twenty-four per cent. on that increased capital, not one dollar in cash having been added to the capital, and had last year paid twelve per cent. on that five hundred thousand dollars, reserving a much larger sum from its earnings than it had divided.

Mr. PURELL, of New-York, opposed the repeal of the duties on salt. He said that he represented a district which was largely interested in the manufacture of salt, though he himself had no personal interest in it. He had listened to the debate for the purpose of discovering, if possible, any good valid reason for the attempt to strike down one of the industrial interests of the country by putting salt on the free list. If the cost of salt had been largely increased under the present rate of duty there might be much force in the proposition, but the truth was that salt was today cheaper than it was in 1860, when the duty on salt was merely nominal, or just nothing at all. He, therefore, objected to the singling out of that interest and making it the subject of legislation.

Mr. RANDALL, of New-York, offered an amendment to put tea and coffee on the free list.

Mr. GARFIELD, of Ohio, supported the bill, and referred to the argument of Mr. BLAIR, that coal must take salt by the hand, and salt must take something else by the hand, and all interests unite their forces. He (Mr. GARFIELD) would not strike such a blow to the whole Tariff bill.

Mr. FARNSWORTH, of Illinois, in reply to the argument that the House should act on the Tariff bill as a whole, said that his experience had taught him that if they were to reform the tariff at all, they must do it item by item. They could never do it otherwise, because the "ring" against them would be too powerful.

Mr. SPEER, of Pennsylvania, argued against the repeal of duties on coal, and did not know what the West proposed to gain by it, but he knew what New-England proposed to gain. The Nova Scotia coal was mined by New-England capital, and this simply meant to strike down Pennsylvania interest and Pennsylvania capital, and to build up New-England capital and New-England interests.

Mr. STEVENSON moved to amend by putting lumber, timber, and wood of all kinds on the free list.

Mr. ROOSEVELT, of New-York, argued in favor of the repeal of the duties on salt and coal.

After further discussion by Messrs. KELLEY of Pennsylvania, and HALE, the time for debate ended.

Mr. LEACH moved to amend the bill by raising the internal tax on manufactured tobacco to twelve cents a pound. Negatived.

Mr. LEONARD MYERS, of Pennsylvania, moved to make the internal tax on manufactured tobacco to sixteen cents per pound. Agreed to—73 to 67.

Mr. RANDALL's amendment to repeal the duties on tea and coffee was agreed to by 80 to 50. This action on the part of the Committee was favored and supported by the opponents of the bill for the purpose of loading it down with amendments and thus defeating it.

Mr. BUTLER, of Tennessee, moved to reduce the tax on brandy distilled from apples and peaches to seventy-five cents per gallon. Agreed to.

Mr. BUTLER, of Massachusetts, moved to put potatoes on the free list. Agreed to.

Mr. KERR, of Indiana, moved to put bunting on the free list. Agreed to.

Mr. STEVENSON moved to put barley and malt on the free list. Rejected, 35 to 58.

Mr. KELLEY offered as an amendment the whole of the present Tariff law.

The reading of the amendment would have occupied several hours. After the Clerk had been reading for some minutes a motion was made that the Committee rise, which was agreed to.

MISCELLANEOUS BUSINESS.

The Speaker appointed on the Committee of Elections Messrs. URSOM of Ohio, and HAZELTON of Wisconsin, instead of STEVENSON and FINKELNBURG, excused.

Mr. HOAR, of Massachusetts, introduced a bill to grant certain articles of machinery to the Industrial Home School of the District of Columbia. Passed.

Mr. LANSING, of New-York, offered a resolution requiring undistributed public documents of last Congress to be given to the members of the present. Agreed to.

Mr. BECK, of Kentucky, introduced a bill for the removal of all legal and political disabilities.

After arguments in its favor by Messrs. BECK and FARNSWORTH, the House, at 4½ o'clock, adjourned till Monday.

New-York Liberal Club—Hon. Horace Greeley on Protection.

The regular meeting of the New-York Liberal Club was unusually well attended, last evening, owing to the announcement that Hon. HORACE GREELEY would reply to the letter of JOHN STUART MILL, written in defense of free trade. Mr. GREELEY said that the first thing that would strike an unprejudiced mind was the want of a philosophical spirit in this last epistle from the eminent English scholar. It is filled, he said, with intellectual sarcasms. This is no new question. It has been discussed for over 150 years, and it is hardly just to charge such men as PITT, HAMILTON and CLAY with duplicity and fraud for supporting ideas opposed to free trade. Yet Mr. MILL has done this. The lecturer then made a complete review of the letter. He denied that the rate of wages in a country increased in proportion to the amount of unoccupied land, and cited the case of Canada as an example. The idea of protection was not to increase the wealth of a few, but, by reducing the number of persons employed in transporting articles of consumption, to increase the number of actual producers. He thought that the years 1816 and '20, had demonstrated to the country the ruinous effects of free trade, and he did not see how any one could have the hardihood to wish to repeat the experiment. After he had finished, Mr. CHAS. MORAN made a short reply, sustaining Mr. MILL, and charging Mr. GREELEY with finding faults in other people, in which he was himself pre-eminent. Mr. ALEX. DELMAR also spoke in the same strain, after which the meeting adjourned. Among the gentlemen present were Profs. W. C. Lyman, Peay; Messrs. M. Fagnani, Chas. Marshall, J. Wilson MacDonald, and J. D. Bell.,

Political Duties of Christian Young Men—Lecture by Rev. Stephen Merritt, Jr.

Rev. STEPHEN MERRITT lectured last evening before the western branch of the Young Men's Christian Association, No. 285 Hudson-street, on the political duties of Christian young men.

The question, he said, was one of vital importance to Christian young men, who should make the power of their influence felt through the State, and as the prosperity of the county depends very much on the manner in which the elective franchise is exercised, they should arouse themselves to a full sense of the great privilege granted to them. Demagogism is rampant in our midst; it demoralizes society by appealing to the passions, inflaming the brutal passion of the mob and bribing the clergy. It succeeds because respectable people refrain from going to the polls, and the consequence of their criminal apathy is seen in the corruption of their public men. Christian men should impeach and condemn every law, custom or usage tending to debase mankind. They should not abandon the elective franchise, leaving the depraved in possession of so powerful a weapon. The ballot was the greatest political gift given by God to man, and how little was thought of it! The purity of the ballot-box should be preserved; it should be to them what Christ is to Christianity, an emblem of power. It was true, he said, that principles, not politics, should prevail, and he believed that in the midst of the darkness and gloom which surrounded them a light was breaking, that a better day was dawning, when truth and virtue should prevail. He asked them to do their duty as citizens and as Christian men, and not to remain apathetic in future, and not allow a class to rule the nation who were the lowest of the low. Unless they did their duty in this respect, they were not fit to live, fit to die, or fit for a hereafter.

Trial of Silvi Maillard for the Murder of George Wilson—Discharge of the Jury.

In the Kings County Court of Oyer and Terminer, before Judge TAPPAN and Justices VOORHEES and JOHNSON, SILVI MAILLARD was placed on trial, yesterday morning, charged with the murder of GEO. WILSON on the evening of the 6th of January last, at the corner of Water and Grand streets, Williamsburg. The circumstances attending the commission of the crime are fresh in the public mind. Our limited space precludes our giving the testimony. The deceased and the prisoner, it will be remembered, had a quarrel on a ferry-boat plying between New-York, and had crossed the Grand-street ferry on the same boat, on their way back to Brooklyn, E. D. No words were exchanged until they reached the corner of Grand and Water streets, when the deceased, it is said, jostled against the prisoner, and he, supposing he was about to be robbed, drew his pistol and shot WILSON, who died shortly afterward. The defense was that the murder was committed in self-defense.

The jury, after being out five hours, were unable to agree upon a verdict. They were therefore discharged from further consideration of the case. The prisoner was sent back to jail.

Railroad Mishap—Narrow Escape of a Passenger-Train.

As the propeller Seth Foster, laden with coal, and bound to Newark, was nearing the drawbridge on the New-Jersey Central Railroad, over Newark Bay, yesterday morning, she was struck by a heavy squall, which rendered her so unmanageable that she was swept against one of the columns that support the bridge and displaced it, and had a part of her own bow stove in. The shock to the bridge was so serious that employes of the railroad could not repair the damage in time for a due passenger train, which approached the other end of the bridge before the men recovered sufficiently from their agitation to conceive the danger. Fortunately, through the acute perception of the engineer, who fancied all was not right on seeing the crowd ahead, the train was stopped within a few feet of the disarranged switch, and thus was averted what, in all probability, would otherwise have proved a catastrophe. After a few hours' delay the train proceeded on its way, and by noon the bridge was again in complete working order.

The coal strike, the Crispins' late strike, and the "Heathen Chinee," were discussed at some length, but no action was taken in relation to either.

It was decided to reassemble two days after the meeting of the Republican National Convention.

After recommending to that body as candidates for President and Vice-President for 1872, Gen. GRANT and Col. GIBBONS, the Convention adjourned.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

NEW-YORK.

One of the largest and most efficiently taught of the evening schools of the Children's Aid Society, in the Eleventh Ward School, which closed last night with appropriate exercises. Mr. DUPUY presided, and after delivering one of his excellent impromptu speeches, that go directly to the heart and awaken the keenest interest in his hearers, introduced Hon. Judge HOOPER C. VAN VORST, one of the Commissioners of Education. It would be difficult to find any one better qualified to address an audience of children than Judge VAN VORST. He possesses an immense fund of anecdote and illustration, which combined with great earnestness and kindliness of manner, make his speeches exceedingly interesting. The scholars engaged creditably in a variety of exercises which bespoke the painstaking efforts of their excellent teacher, MISS VAN VORST. The discipline of the school was much admired, Miss VAN VORST being able to control with the greatest ease the large number of boys by a simple movement of a finger. A bountiful supply of fruit, cake and other refreshments was furnished to the scholars, after which the ceremonies closed.

NEW-JERSEY.

The Young Men's Christian Association of Jersey City has become bankrupt, after a lingering decline, and yesterday the contents of the building occupied by the organization were distrained for five months' rent, amounting to about $450, by virtue of a landlord's warrant. The Association was in its fourth year of existence. Two years ago it numbered 800 members, and during the year ending April, 1870, the receipts and expenditures were $2,750 90 and $2,726 05 respectively.

The brewery operated by Mr. VINCENTZ, in Elizabeth, was discovered on fire, early yesterday morning, and notwithstanding the efforts of the Fire Departments, was almost completely destroyed, while the adjacent buildings were saved with much difficulty. Mr. VINCENTZ's loss on stock and fixtures is about $3,000, on which there is an insurance of $1,500 in the Citizen's Mutual Fire, Marine and Steam-boiler Companies of Newark. The loss on the buildings will probably approach $5,000, on which there is a full insurance. Dr. JOHN WASHINGTON is the owner.

Yesterday, as a Washington train was moving out of the depot at Jersey City, the cry of "stop thief" issued from one of the cars, and at the same time a man jumped off and fled along the track. He was quickly pursued by several citizens and a policeman, and finally captured, but neither the booty nor the name of the loser is known, as the latter went on in the train. The supposed pickpocket discharged several shots from a revolver at his pursuers, but without effect. It is said he was seen to throw away a pocket-book in his flight, but it was not found.

The remains of the man reported yesterday as having been found floating in the water near the bay bridge, at Elizabeth, have been identified as those of JOHN NICHOLS, a tailor, who was missing from his former home at Port Richmond, Staten Island, since last December.
